BRITISH AVIATORS RAID A BIG ZEPPELIN HANGAR

London, Sept. 23.—The Admiralty confirms the report of a raid on Zeppelin shed at Dusseldorf in following communication:—

"Yesterday the British aeroplane of the naval wing delivered an attack on the Zeppelin shed at Dusseldorf (on the Rhine river, about 60 miles north of Cologne). The conditions were rendered very difficult by the misty weather, but Flight Lieutenant C. H. Collet dropped three bombs on the Zeppelin shed, approaching within 400 feet. The extent of the damage done is unknown. Flight Lieutenant Collet's machine was struck by one projectile but all the machines returned safely to their point of departure.

"The importance of this incident lies in the fact that it shows that the event of further bombs being dropped into Antwerp or other Belgian towns, measures of reprisal certainly be adopted if desired to most any extent."

The aeroplanes flew from Antwerp to Dusseldorf, approximately a distance of 500 miles. The Zeppelin shed on which they dropped bombs is those of the German aerial fleet which would co-operate with the German navy in case of an attempt to raid on Britain.

LENNOX & ADDINGTON PATRIOTIC FUND

Throughout the Dominion from the Atlantic to the Pacific, great enthusiasm is manifested in the campaigns being carried on in behalf of Patriotic Funds. Every town and County has organized in order that funds may be collected and distributed for the benefit of those who have gone or will go to the front and for those who are dependent upon them. In this splendid work Lennox and Addington is prepared to do her part.

The County would not be true to her traditions if she were to hesitate for one moment to do her duty towards those who represent her on the field of battle. It is our battle they are fighting, our interests they are defending and we share in the glory and the fruits of victory.

In last week's issue of this paper
the details of the organization of the Lennox and Addington Patriotic Fund were published. This committee is now preparing to carry on a systematic canvas of the entire county in order that every person and every society may have the privilege and opportunity of contributing. The minimum amount required is the sum of $8,000 and already many subscriptions have been sent in. The Chairman of the Committee, His Honor Judge Madden, in his inaugural address laid stress upon three points which might well be made the keynotes of this campaign. He said there were three kinds of patriotism:
First, "Blood" patriotism which is shown in the fellow that shoulders the gun and willingly marches forth to fight his country's battle; secondly, "Pocket" patriotism which is shown in the appreciative of the warriors at home who assist those who suffer from the war; and third,
the patriotism of "silence," which is shown by being non-criticising of the
the amount of the subscription made by any person.

It is felt that under the conditions every person will give what they are able because all are convinced of the necessity. The greatest confidence is felt by the committee that from every part of the county a splendid response will be made and every citizen will feel it his patriotic duty to do all he can to help on the good work.

TO SEND ALL TO FRONT

Entire Force at Valcartier Will Form First Contingent.

After Conference With the Premier and Members of the Cabinet, Col. Hughes Announces That the Present Force of 31,200 Officers and Men Will Go Instead of an Army Division of 22,000 as Planned.

VALCARTIER CAMP, Sept. 22.—Canada will send nearly ten thousand more men on the first contingent than was asked by the British War Office. This announcement was made by Col. Sam Hughes last night, and the decision was the result of a conference between Sir Robert Borden, the Minister of Militia, and Sir George Foster and Hon. Robert Rogers at the camp yesterday. It means that 31,200 officers and men and 7,500 horses will be transported to England, instead of a division of 22,500 men which was the original plan, following the request of the Imperial authorities. It also means that every officer in training here will be taken aboard, which has caused great rejoicing among those who expected to be rejected. Every man in camp will be fit for active service will comprise the first contingent.

Asked whether any soldiers would remain in training at Valcartier as if there would be a second contingent immediately mobilized, Col. Hugh stated:

"We have decided that every man will be taken from this camp. Training line from Canada will consist of an army division of 22,500 men but at the same time we have deemed it advisable to send the rest of them to act as a reserve, instead leaving them here and not being able to use them at a time when they are greatly needed because of possible delay in transporting them. As to whether a second contingent will be mobilized, I cannot say. The services 100,000 can be obtained just as easily as were the services of those present encamped here. A second contingent will be quickly mobilized if necessary."

The first contingent will consist of nineteen battalions of infantry, including the Princess Patricia's Regiment, which is now in training in Levis. This latter regiment will be part of the first contingent. The original intention was to send on 12 battalions. There will also be three squadrons of Strathcona Horse, three squadrons of the Royal Canadian Dragoons and the artillery about 4,000 men and many twelve eighteen and sixty-pound guns.

Sir Robert Borden shook hands with every officer in camp yesterday morning. He addressed the officers each brigade, telling them that it had been decided to send every officer a man to England.

This indeed was a splendid surprise to the officers, many of whom thought that they would not go owing to the surplus. It is quite possible that many will be unattached and may be used by English territorial regiments. Canada will also contribute about 300 machine guns.

The Duke of Connaught inspected the two cavalry regiments, the Strathcona Horse and Royal Canadian Dragoons yesterday morning. The royal party and Cabinet Ministers return to Ottawa last night.

CANADA WILL RECOVER.

Hon. W. T. White Says Outlook For Dominion Is Promising.

GANANOQUE, Ont., Sept. 22.—Canada's business outlook is promising; the first and worst effects of the war will gradually wear away, the higher prices of grains will more than neutralize their shortage in amount, and future agricultural production should be immensely stimulated, enabling the country greatly to increase her exports, thus ensuring payment of interest on her borrowings and other obligations abroad, and the preservation of national credit; the present financial expedients were efficient shock absorbers.

These were the conclusions of Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, in an address before the Gananoque Board of Trade yesterday on "War and General Trade Conditions of Canada."

While international markets were at present closed, said Hon. Mr. White, no doubt borrowing, although on a much reduced scale, would be possible later, and increased thrift on the part of the public would be a material factor in furnishing national working capital. The spirit with which the Canadian community had met the situation was wholly admirable.

With so many men offering their lives for the Empire and undergoing hardships, privation and suffering at the front it was the duty of every man at home to put forth his utmost effort to increase production, to add to the national wealth, that the wastage of war might be repaired and the strength of the nation increased to meet whatever of struggle and stress that may lie before us.

Belgium Refused Bribe.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—In a despatch from Antwerp the correspondent of the Central News declares that the armistice proposal made some days ago by Germany to Belgium provided that the civil government in all Belgian towns should be immediately resumed by Belgium, and the German occupation of these towns be discontinued, on condition that communication with the Germans in France be not interfered with.

Belgium refused to agree, saying to do so would be disloyal to the allies.

Servian Prince Wounded.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—A Nish despatch to the Havas Agency says that Prince George of Servia, while leading his battalion in an assault, was hit by a ball which entered near the spinal column and came out the right shoulder. The wound is said not to be dangerous.

During the early part of the war Prince George was reported to have been wounded.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22.—It has been decided to raise forthwith a second contingent of Canadians, 19,000 strong, making 50,000 in all, with the 31,000 going in the present contingent, says a well defined report here yesterday. The second contingent is to be ready to sail for the scene of conflict by Nov. 1.

LAND FOR PRISON FARM.

Thirteen Thousand Acres Chosen For Establishment Near Sudbury.

TORONTO, Sept. 22.—The Ontario Government is projecting still another industrial farm. Hon. W. J. Hanna announced yesterday that 13,000 acres of crown lands in the judicial district of Sudbury had been selected for this purpose and that work on it was beginning at once. The first contingent of men left Sudbury for the new site yesterday and will set up tents until suitable shelters are erected.

The new farm is situated in Burwash Township, at a distance of 2 miles from Sudbury. It is bounded on north and south by the Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern Railways, and has splendid facilities for stock-raising. It is the expectation of the Minister that the assistance of the Fort William institution and others now planned, that the 2,000 cattle annually consumed in provincial institutions will be supplied entirely by the province.

Survivors of Karluk Sail.

NOME, Alaska, Sept. 22.—Thirteen Caucasian survivors of the Stepanoff steamer Karluk, who were taken from Wrangell Island by the schooner King and Winge, and transferred to the U. S. revenue cutter Bear, are still on the Bear under the care of the cutter's physicians. The four Eskimos were landed at Nome. All the parties except William L. McKinlay, the scientist, are suffering from frozen feet.

The captain of the Bear plans to take the survivors to Dutch Harbor where they will be transferred to the steamer Senator, which will land them at Victoria and Vancouver.

Praises Chivalry of King George.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 22.—Commenting on the report brought to Cologne that King George V. had visited wounded German soldiers at Southampton The Cologne Gazette says in a recent issue:

"The war which now rages has brought about so much hate through the infamous conduct on the part of our opponents that we recognize more highly still the chivalrous behavior of the English King."

Cooling Water Without Using Ice.

To cool water without using ice get slender glass test tube from any drug store. Half fill it with nitrate of ammonia salts, fill up with water, cork tightly. Shake till the salt is dissolved. Be careful to wipe the outside of the tube dry in order that all traces of the nitrate may be removed. Place the tube into a glass of water and agitate as you would a spoon. The water is rapidly chilled. The nitrate of ammonia salts can be bought at any drug store. This is a far better way of cooling water than putting ice in it.—New York World.

DRIVEN SEVEN MILES.

German West Wing Forced Back By Advance of Allies.

ON THE BATTLE FRONT, Sept. 22.—The western wing of the German line has been thrust back about seven miles during the last 48 hours as a sequel to continuous fighting night and day.

Both armies, despite almost superhuman fatigues, show the utmost determination not to yield an inch of ground without a terrible struggle, but the fresher troops at the disposal of the allied commanders, have gradually forced the Germans to recede.

The Turcos are adding daily to their record of daring achievements. Late Sunday night in a costly bayonet encounter they broke through the German lines without firing more than a few shots, recaptured and brought back four field guns which the French troops had abandoned the previous day. They seemed to disdain the murderous rifle and machine gunfire poured into them, refusing to listen to the officers who tried to keep them under cover.

Cold steel yesterday again played a big part in the battle of the big hosts fighting along the Aisne, the Oise and Woivre. The most remarkable point about the encounters is that the troops scarcely see each other before they actually come hand to hand.

The recklessness displayed at the beginning of the hostilities, with the resultant carnage through the machine guns, has almost disappeared and every movement of the attacking and defending troops is carried out with the utmost caution until the moment of actual contact.

SHOT BY KING ALBERT.

Chauffeur Tried to Drive Monarch Into German Lines.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—The Progres du Nord yesterday relates a remarkable story of the King of the Belgians shooting his chauffeur while the latter traitorously attempted to drive him into the German lines. The King was with his troops at South Antwerp, and ordered his chauffeur to drive ahead.

After a while the King noticed that the driver changed his directions. His Majesty then warned him, and when the chauffeur took no notice, ordered him to halt. This having no effect, King Albert, convinced of his treachery, drew his revolver and shot the chauffeur dead. He himself stopped the car and drove back to the Belgian lines in safety.

In the man's clothing papers were found showing that he had received a German offer of a quarter-million dollars for the King's capture.

GERMANS ACCUSE RULER.

War Lord and Ministers Should Be Arrested, Says Manifesto.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Members of the German Humanity League, who on Aug. 11 issued the statement that the end of the war inevitably would see the deposition of the Kaiser, have made the following further statement:

"We reiterate as men passionately loving the fatherland, it is the duty of every man who cares for the welfare of mankind, to join hands in arresting the Kaiser and the Ministers around him who are responsible for the appalling crimes perpetrated on non-combatants, which have disgraced our nation in the eyes of the whole civilized world.

"The true and lasting interests of the toilers and wage-earners of Germany can only be served by the complete victory of the allied armies.

VON KLUK IS RETIRING

Furious Anglo-French Attacks on German Right Succeed.

Fragmentary Reports From Scene of Great Battle Along the Aisne Show That the Allies Continue to Force the Germans Back and Von Kluk Is in Danger of Being Cut Off—End of Battle Is Near.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The British and French attack on the German right is succeeding, according to despatches received here yesterday. Gen. Von Kluk is reported to have suffered terrible losses, and to be slowly giving way before the furious attacks of the allies.

The following official statement was issued in Paris last night by the War Office:

"On our left we have advanced along the Oise to the heights of Lasigny. East of the Oise and north of the Aisne the Germans display renewed activity, making violent attacks and bayonet charges. They have been repulsed everywhere. Around Rheims the Germans have not attempted any infantry attacks. "In the centre, in Champagne, and west of the forest of Argonne, the the surplus. It is quite possible that many will be unattached and may be used by English territorial iments. Canada will also contrive about 300 machine guns. The Duke of Connaught inspected two cavalry regiments, the Strathmore Horse and Royal Canadian Dragoon yesterday morning. The royal ty and Cabinet Ministers returned Ottawa last night.

Second Contingent Required.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22.—It has been decided to raise forthwith a second contingent of Canadians, 19,000 strong, making 50,000 in all, with 31,000 going in the present contingent, says a well defined report yesterday. The second contingent is to be ready to sail for the theatre of conflict by Nov. 1.

LAND FOR PRISON FARM.

Fourteen Thousand Acres Chosen For Establishment Near Sudbury.

TORONTO, Sept. 22.—The Ontario government is projecting still another industrial farm. Hon. W. J. Han-announced yesterday that 13,000 acres of crown lands in the judicial district of Sudbury had been selected for this purpose and that work on it was beginning at once. The first contingent of men left Sudbury for the new site yesterday and will set up tents until suitable shelters are erected.

The new farm is situated in Bursh Township, at a distance of 21 miles from Sudbury. It is bounded north and south by the Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern Railways, and has splendid facilities for stock-raising. It is the expectation of the Minister that the assistance of the Fort William institution and otherwise planned, that the 2,000 cattle annually consumed in provincial institutions will be supplied entirely from the province.

Survivors of Karluk Sail.

NOME, Alaska, Sept. 22.—The eight Caucasian survivors of the Stepanoff steamer Karluk, who were rescued from Wrangell Island by the schooner King and Winge, and transferred to the U. S. revenue cutter Albatross, are still on the Bear under the care of the cutter's physicians. The Eskimos were landed at Nome. The parties except William L. McNally, the scientist, are suffering from frozen feet.

The captain of the Bear plans to take the survivors to Dutch Harbor, where they will be transferred to the Amer Senator, which will land them at Victoria and Vancouver.

Praises Chivalry of King George.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 22.—Commenting on the report brought to logne that King George V. had killed wounded German soldiers in Southampton The Cologne Gazette writes in a recent issue:

"The war which now rages has brought about so much hatred and rough the infamous conduct on the part of our opponents that we recognize more highly still the chivalrous behavior of the English King."

Cooling Water Without Using Ice.

To cool water without using ice get a glass test tube from any drug store. Half fill it with nitrate of ammonia salts, fill up with water, cork tightly. Shake till the salt is dissolved. Careful to wipe the outside of the test tube dry in order that all traces of the salt may be removed. Place the test tube into a glass of water and agitate with a spoon. The water is instantly chilled. The nitrate of ammonia salts can be bought at any drug store. This is a far better way of cooling water than putting ice in it.—New York World.

see the position of the Kaiser, have made the following further statement:

"We reiterate as men passionately loving the fatherland, it is the duty of every man who cares for the welfare of mankind, to join hands in arresting the Kaiser and the Ministers around him who are responsible for the appalling crimes perpetrated on non-combatants, which have disgraced our nation in the eyes of the whole civilized world.

"The true and lasting interests of the toilers and wage-earners of Germany can only be served by the complete victory of the allied armies.

"There can be no lasting peace, no security for the rights of man, and no protection of democracy from brigandage and death until the imperial domination of Prussia within Germany is crushed by disarmament and swept away forever."

BERNSTORFF INSINCERE

Churchill Says There Can Be No Peace With Prussian Militarism.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 22.—(Via London.)—In a speech here last night, Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, referring to the talk of peace by the German Ambassador to the United States, Count Von Bernstorff, said:

"His vague talk of peace is as insincere as the information of which he is the source. Peace with the German people might be arranged in good time, but there would be no peace with Prussian militarism, short of the grave."

England, said the First Lord, did not seek to subjugate Germany or Austria, or their people, however complete her victory might be over them. The worst that could happen to them after the war was that they should be set free to live, and let live fairly and justly.

TO USE ARCHANGEL.

Russia Will Try to Keep Port Open With Ice-Breakers.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—According to information received by the British Board of Trade, it may be found possible to keep open the Russian port of Archangel to the Arctic Ocean by means of the ice-breaking steamers until the end of November and possibly until the middle of December. It is also hoped to make arrangements for additional berths which will facilitate the discharge of private cargoes.

Archangel is the most northerly point in the railway system of Europe and is the only large seaport on the northeast of the Russian empire. The harbor usually is free from ice only between July and September.

Boy of 15 Kills Farmer.

EMERSON, Man., Sept. 22.—As the result of a feud between Christian Heintz, a farmer living in the district of Overton, about 25 miles south of here, and Alex. Dalishak, the 15-year-old son of a neighbor, the former is dead and the boy is under arrest charged with killing him.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. attacks of the allies.

The following official statement was issued in Paris last night by the War Office:

"On our left we have advanced along the Oise to the heights of Lasigny. East of the Oise and north of the Aisne the Germans display renewed activity, making violent attacks and bayonet charges. They have been repulsed everywhere. Around Rheims the Germans have not attempted any infantry attacks.

"In the centre, in Champagne, and west of the forest of Argonne, beyond Souain, we have taken Mesnil, Les Hurlus and Massignes. The enemy still holds the country from Thiaucourt to Cannone Passon Chatel.

"On our right wing, in Lorraine and the Vosges, there are no developments. The Germans are fortifying positions on the Delme, south of Chateau Sains."

A Paris despatch states that The Echo de Paris announces that Gen. Von Kluk is planning a retreat to the Ardennes, where a position for another stand has been prepared. A despatch from Rome agrees with the Paris story, but states that Gen. Von Kluk has already begun his retreat.

These reports follow earlier ones, which indicated strongly that Gen. Von Kluk's army was again in a serious position and in danger of being cut off from the main German line.

So serious has the position of the German right become, that it is declared 100,000 men are being rushed to its support from Belgium. The resistance of Gen. Von Kluk's wing has been determined, but the allied forces are continuing their movements in an endeavor to outflank him. This is the ninth day of the battle of the Aisne.

The British and French have been consistently attacking the wing held by Gen. Von Kluk since the battle of the Aisne began, and apparently have been attempting a sort of enveloping movement, which appears to have been partly successful.

A Paris despatch states that reports are continuously being brought in regarding British-French successes against Von Kluk. The allies have been determined from the start to crush the Germans' right wing, and their continued attacks apparently have had their effect, too, on the German centre, for, according to despatches, the allies have made a substantial breach of the strong German line between Laon and Rheims.

A Daily Chronicle despatch states that the success of the allies here threatens to divide the German forces, and is bound to have its effect on the German lines, which must fall back. The correspondent adds that the fighting is continuing desperately, and that the Germans are still holding a strong position.

A Paris despatch yesterday states that a French officer back from the front told of an extended aeroplane reconnaissance, which showed that the Germans were making plans for retiring from their present positions. There was a report, the correspondent stated, that the German commanders had received orders to retire to the German frontiers, leaving 200,000 men to defend the Aisne river positions and cover the retirement.

A despatch to The Express says that reconnaissances by aeroplanes near Soissons show that a large part of the German army is retiring with trains and heavy stores.

Both allies and Germans are making desperate efforts to outflank each other and win a decisive advantage at the Aisne. More than 2,000,000 men are engaged and the artillery fire is terrific.

The German left has fought for days to turn the French right wing resting on Verdun. The latter point is heavily fortified, and must fall before the French can possibly be flanked, thus giving the allies considerable advantage along the battle line as drawn at present.

The weather continues the worst that could possibly be imagined for such a battle as is now being waged, heavy rains continue to fall, and the trenches are filled with water. The British forces have borne the brunt of the fighting in the centre, and charges to carry German trenches have been made across fields swept from end to end by rifle, machine gun and shrapnel fire.

Signs now point to a termination of the battle of the Aisne, which will doubtless prove to have been the bloodiest in all history.

SPEECH OF THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION

In his address to the House of Commons, Sir Wilfrid Laurier spoke as follows:

"Mr. Speaker, the observations which I shall have to offer to the House are few and brief. In fact, apart from the usual compliments and congratulations to the mover and the seconder of the address, which, I am glad to say, I have more usual pleasure in extending to them, I have but one declaration to make. The gravity of the occasion which has called us together makes it incumbent upon us even to disregard the formalities and conventionalities which in ordinary times the rules of the House, written and unwritten, enjoin as a wise safeguard against precipitate action but which, on such an occasion as this, impede us in dealing with the momentous question before us.

A UNITED CANADA AND A UNITED PARLIAMENT.

"This session has been called for the purpose of giving the authority of Parliament and the sanction of law to such measures as have already been taken by the Government, and any further measures that may be needed to insure the defence of Canada and to give what aid may be in our power to the mother country in the stupendous struggle which now confronts us. Speaking for those who sit around me, speaking for the wide constituency which we represent in this House, I hasten to say that to all these measures we are prepared to give immediate assent. If in what has been done or what remains to be done or should be differently done, we raise no question, we take no exception, we offer no criticism, and we shall offer no criticism so long as there is danger at the front. It is our duty, more pressing upon us than all other duties at once, on this first day of this extraordinary session of the Canadian Parliament, to let Great Britain know, that there is in Canada but one mind and one heart, and that all Canadians stand behind the mother country, conscious and proud that she has engaged in this war, not from any selfish motive, for any purpose of aggrandisement, but to maintain untarnished the honour of her name, to fulfil her obligations to her allies, to maintain her treaty obligations, and to save civilization and to ensure their safe passage across the ocean. What measures have been taken in regard to that we have not yet been told, but I have no doubt that we shall have that information in due time. The correspondence brought down yesterday, however, has informed us that the Canadian Government has already taken steps to send a contingent of twenty thousand men or thereabouts to take their place in the firing line.

CAADA'S DUTY TO ASSIST THE MOTHERLAND.

"Upon this occasion I owe it to the House and to myself to speak with absolute frankness and candour. This is a subject which has often been an occasion of debate in this House. I have always said, and I repeat it on this occasion, that there is but one mind and one heart in Canada. At other times we may have had different views as to the methods by which we are to serve our country, and our empire. More than once I have declared that if England were ever in danger—nay, not only in danger, but if she were ever engaged in such a contest as would put her strength to the test—then it would be the duty of Canada to assist the motherland to the utmost of Canada's ability. England to-day is not engaged in an ordinary contest. The war in which she is engaged will in all probability—nay, in absolute certainty—stagger the world with its magnitude and its horror. But that war is for as noble a cause as ever impelled a nation to risk her all upon the arbitrament of the sword. That question is no longer at issue; the judgement of the world has already pronounced upon it. I speak not only of those nations which are engaged in this war, but of the neutral nations. The testimony of the ablest men of these nations, without dissenting voice, is that to-day the allied nations are fighting for freedom against oppression, for democracy against autocracy, for civilization against reversion to that state of barbarism in which the supreme law is the law of might.

"It is an additional source of pride to us that England did not seek this war. It is a matter of history—one of the noblest pages of the history of England—that she never drew the sword until every means had been exhausted to secure and to keep an honourable peace. For a time it was hoped that Sir Edward Grey, who on more than one occasion has saved Europe from such a calamity, would again avert the awful scourge of war. Sir, it will go down on a still nobler page of history that England could have averted this war if she had been willing to forego the position which

STORIES OF LISZT

How the Famous Master Played to a Hidden Audience.

A SURPRISE AT THE FINISH.

For a Moment It Filled the Hostess and Company With Dismay, but Proved a Case of All's Well That Ends Well—A Snub For a Tactless Baroness.

Liszt resented people counting on his playing. When Baroness K. inveigled him into promising to take tea with her, because he knew her father, she, on his accepting, invited a lot of friends, holding out hopes that Liszt would play. She pushed the piano into the middle of the room—no one could have possibly failed to see it.

Every one was on the qui vive when Liszt arrived and breathless with anticipation. Liszt, who had had many surprises of this sort, I imagine, saw the situation at a glance. After several people had been presented to him, Liszt, with his most captivating smile, said to the hostess:

"Madam, where is your piano?" and looked all about for the instrument though it was within an inch of his nose.

"Oh, monseigneur! Would you, really . . . ?" advancing toward the piano, triumphantly. "You are too kind. I never should have dared to ask you." And, waving her hand toward it, "Here is the piano!"

"Ah, yes," said Liszt, who dearly loves a joke, "I wished to put my hat on it."

Very crestfallen, but still undaunted, the tactless baroness cried, "But, monseigneur, you will not refuse, if only to play a scale—merely to touch the piano!"

But Liszt, as unkind as she was tactless, answered, coldly: "Madam, I never play my scales in the afternoon," and turned his back on her and talked with Madam Helbig.

On another occasion Liszt wrote to me that he would bring some of his songs to try over at 5 o'clock. I inclose his letter. What a chance, thought I, for me to give pleasure to some of my friends who I knew were longing to see him. Although he had said entreatous in his letter, and I knew that he really wanted to look through the songs alone with me, I could not resist the temptation—though it was such rank disobedience—and said to them:

"Liszt is coming to me at 5 o'clock. If you would like to hear him, and consent to be hidden behind a door, I will invite you."

They all accepted with rapture and were assembled in the little salon before the time appointed. The door was left open and a large screen placed before it.

Johan fetched Liszt in our carriage, as he always does. I received him and the book of "Lieder," which he brought with him. (Only Johan and Nina were present.) He opened the book at "Comment disaient ils?" one of his most beautiful songs, which has an exquisite but very difficult accompaniment. He played with fairy fingers, and we went over it several times. I could see the screen swerving and waving about, but Liszt's back was turned, so he

RECORD FOR ALL NATIONS.

Late Sir Benjamin Stone "Snapshot" All Over the World.

Sir Benjamin Stone, dean of photographers of public events, who just died at the age of seventy in England, represented East Birmingham in Parliament for fifty years. At a complimentary luncheon given him by members of House of Commons he once was called "photographer-in-chief to Speaker and the House of Commons."

From youth he was a great traveler and his difficulty in purchasing scenes of the places he visited what turned him into a photographer himself. As long ago as 1868 he gave a pictorial record of the life of the nations. He interested others in this work, and the immense stores of photographs in the British Museum are the direct result.

In the course of the sitting of the first sitting of the First Parliament of which he was a member he took a picture of every member and officials and journalists as well.

On the occasion of the Coronation of King Edward, Sir Benjamin took about 300 photographs, which were very useful to the officials who prepared the ceremony when King George succeeded.

Sir Benjamin's most amusing traveling experiences was when he went to Brazil to photograph

There is danger at the front. It is our duty, more pressing upon us than all other duties at once, on this first day of this extraordinary session of the Canadian Parliament, to let Great Britain know, that there is in Canada but one mind and one heart, and that all Canadians stand behind the mother country, conscious and proud that she has engaged in this war, not from any selfish motive, for any purpose of aggrandisement, but to maintain untarnished the honour of her name; to fulfil her obligations to her allies, to maintain her treaty obligations, and to save civilization from the unbridled lust of conquest and power.

IMMEDIATE CONSEQUENCES TO CANADA OF EUROPEAN WAR.

"We are British subjects, and to-day we are face to face with the consequences which are involved in that proud fact. Long we have enjoyed the benefit of our British citizenship; to-day it is our duty to accept its responsibilities and its sacrifices. We have long said that when Great Britain is at war we are at war; to-day we realize that Great Britain is at war and that Canada is at war also. Our territory is liable to attack and to invasion. So far as invasion is concerned, I do not see that there is any cause for apprehension, for it seems to me obvious that neither Austria nor Germany, our foes in this war, can command any force able to make an attack so far from their base. But no one pretends that our maritime cities on the Pacific and the Atlantic are free from the possibility, of assault by an audacious corsair, who, descending suddenly upon our shores, might subject us to indignity and insult, and decamp with his booty before punishment could reach him. This is not an unfounded dread of danger; this is no mere illusion; it is a real and indeed a proximate danger, since it is a matter of notoriety that both on the Pacific and on the Atlantic there are German cruisers whose mission is to inflict all the injury they can upon our commerce, and even to make a descent upon our cities should they find our harbours unguarded. We are aware that the Government has already taken measures, and very appropriately, to guard against this danger. We know that one of our battleships on the Pacific has been seeking the enemy to protect our commerce and our cities, and if she has not yet engaged the enemy it is because the enemy has eluded her pursuit.

"We have had another and more striking evidence that when Great Britain is at war we are at war, in this—that our commerce has been interrupted, and perhaps the expression would not be too strong if I were to say that it has been to some extent dislocated. From the day war was declared—nay, from the day the possibility of war was first mooted—our shipping to Great Britain and to Europe has been interrupted. Ships were lying at the docks fully loaded and ready to put to sea, but unable to do so because of the fact that when England is at war Canadian property on the high seas is liable to capture. Our ships therefore had to remain in port so long as precautions had not been taken to clear the way to us that England did not seek this war. It is a matter of history—one of the noblest pages of the history of England—that she never drew the sword until every means had been exhausted to secure and to keep an honourable peace. For a time it was hoped that Sir Edward Grey, who on more than one occasion has saved Europe from such a calamity, would again avert the awful scourge of war. Sir, it will go down on a still nobler page of history that England could have averted this war if she had been willing to forego the position which she has maintained for many centuries as the head of European civilization; if she had been willing to desert her allies, to sacrifice her obligations to allow the German Emperor to trample upon heroic Belgium, to infringe upon the rights of isolated France, and to put down his booted heel upon continental Europe. At that price England would have secured peace; but her answer to the German Emperor was: Your proposals are infamous. And, rather than accept them, England has entered into this war; and there is not to-day all over the universe a British subject, there is not outside the British Empire a single man whose admiration for England is not greater by reason of this firm and noble attitude.

A DOUBLE RESPONSIBILITY AND A DOUBLE HONOUR.

"No to-day England is at war. Her fleets are maintaining the freedom of the ocean. Her armies have already crossed the channel towards plains made famous more than once by British valour, this time to maintain the independence of Belgium by taking a place in the fighting line beside the small and heroic Belgian army, and to render assistance to France, whose forces are concentrated in an effort to repel an invader and to maintain and to save intact that which to a proud nation makes life worth living.

"I am well aware that the small contingent of some 20,000 men which we are going to send will have to show double courage and double steadiness if they are to give any account of themselves among the millions of men who are now converging towards the frontier of France, where the battle of giants is to be decided. But, Sir, it is the opinion of the British Government, as disclosed by the correspondence which was brought down to us yesterday, that the assistance of our troops, humble as it may be, will be appreciated, either for its material value or for the greater moral help which will be rendered. It will be seen by the world that Canada, a daughter of old England, intends to stand by her in this great conflict. When the call comes our answer goes at once, and it goes in the classical language of the British answer to the call to duty: Ready, aye, ready."

"If my words can be heard beyond the walls of this House in the province from which I come, among the men whose blood flows in my veins, I should like them to remember that in taking their place to-day in the ranks of the Canadian army to fight for the cause of the allied nations, a double honour rests upon them. The very cause for which they are called upon to fight is to them doubly sacred."

To overshoot the mark is just as bad as to miss it any other way.

He played with fairy fingers, and we went over it several times. I could see the screen swerving and waving about, but Liszt's back was turned, so he could not see it.

After we had finished tea was served, and then he said, "Have you heard my 'Rigoletto'?"

"Yes," I said, and added, "but not by you."

"Well," he said, "I will play it for you. Your piano is much better than the one I have. It is a pleasure to play on it."

The screen, now alive with emotion, almost tipped over. After "Rigoletto" he played "Les Soirees de Vienne," and this time the screen actually did topple over and exposed to view the group of badly frightened ladies huddled behind it. I shuddered to think how the master would take this horrible treachery.

He took it better than I expected—in fact, he laughed outright. The ladies came forward and were presented to him and were delighted. I am sure that Liszt was, too; at any rate, he laughed so much at my ruse and contrition that the tears rolled down his cheeks. He wiped them away with his pocket handkerchief, which had an embroidered F. L. in the corner. This he left behind and I kept it as a souvenir.—Mme. de Hegemann-Lindencrone in Harper's Magazine.

Her Opportunity.

The man hater had just announced her engagement.

"But you always said that men were horrid creatures," said her friends.

"So they are," replied the bride to be, "and here's my opportunity to punish one of them."

They all agreed that it was real noble of her.

the nations. He interested others in this work, and the immense stores of photographs in the British Museum are the direct result.

In the course of the sitting of first sitting of the First Parliament of which he was a member he took a picture of every member and officials and journalists as well.

On the occasion of the Coronation of King Edward, Sir Benjamin took about 300 photographs, which were very useful to the officials who prepared the ceremony when King George succeeded.

Sir Benjamin's most amusing travelling experiences was when he went to Brazil to photograph the eclipse of the sun. He stayed for time at Sears, and while he was there a revolution broke out. The governor had become unpopular and soldiers rose and "fired" him. Sir Benjamin made arrangements with a photographer to get pictures of the incidents, and the way soldiers posed for the camera was quite like comic opera. They placed cannon across the street wherein the governor's palace was situated, and when they were ready to begin the attack they all stood and posed for the picture. When the governor had bolted and they secured the battered palace, they sent back for the photographer come and take more pictures.

Another adventure was in Chile. He had been "taking" a tempo when he noticed that a large crowd had gathered, so he turned round in order to get a picture of the mob. There was a great murmur which grew into a hubbub. He asked the guide what the matter was and he replied, "They say that you have taken their spirit from them." "Nonsense," Sir Benjamin retorted. "I have taken nothing from them." "Haven't you got their likeness in your box?" the guide inquired, a when this was admitted he remarked triumphantly, "Then, how can you say that you have taken nothing? It was an opportunity for blackmail not to be missed, and the photographer had to distribute large sums before he was allowed to depart peacefully."

TURKISH WOMEN.

They Are Gradually Obtaining Their Emancipation.

It is generally thought that Turkish women are far behind their Western sisters in intelligent and independent thinking.

This, however, is not the case, during the last few years, the Turkish womenfolk have made great progress in learning. In fact, the educated Turkish women, the writer of this article continues, is in many ways far ahead of our Western sisters, she is generally a linguist, and when we allow our daughters to spend most of their time in sport, the Turkish girl is kept as a rule more strictly to her studies, and as a result she can discuss politics and most other subjects of general interest with ease that would astonish the average English girl.

It is obvious, therefore, that a Turkish woman should assert herself and emerge from her seclusion—by discarding the "Charchaff," by seriously taking up some work that will either help her financially or give her some more wide and general interest than she can possibly find if she remains at home hiding her talents behind the "kafes."

TURKISH WOMEN.

They Are Gradually Obtaining Their Emancipation.

It is generally thought that Turkish women are far behind their eastern sisters in intelligent and independent thinking. This, however, is not the case, for during the last few years, the Turkish womenfolk have made great progress in learning. In fact, the educated Turkish women, the writer of the article continues, is in many ways far ahead of our Western sisters, for she is generally a linguist, and while she allows our daughters to spend most of their time in sport, the Turkish girl is kept as a rule more strictly to her studies, and as a result she can discuss politics and most other subjects of general interest with an ease that would astonish the average English girl.

It is obvious, therefore, that the Turkish woman should assert herself and emerge from her seclusion—not discarding the "Charchaff," but seriously taking up some work at will either help her financially give her some more wide and general interest than she can possibly find if she remains at home hiding her talents behind the "kafess." Europeans are too apt to imagine us a Turkish correspondent, that Turkish woman as some one clad in aphanous draperies and complete-the business and public side of life, and by doing so she will not only help herself, but her country also in a very real and efficient manner.

I think I am right in saying that there are many Turkish women today who would like to take up some serious occupation, either from pecuniary motive or merely as a matter of interest outside the home life. For obvious reasons this was impossible in the past, but now, with the constitution and its happy relaxation of many of the old restrictions that so handicapped the Turkish woman, things have changed somewhat, and the time is right for her to take a part in the outside world.

Ancient Music.

Exploration in Bible lands has led to the discovery of a wealth of materials throwing light upon the arts and crafts which are referred to in the Old Testament. The discoveries relating to music have a charm all their own, and excavations at Nipper show, among other things, a shepherd of 6,000 years ago sitting on the grass with a lamb on one side of him and his dog on the other, lazily plucking at the strings of a leather-covered lute. Prof. Garstang unearthed three actual instruments of Beni Hassan—a large harp, a pair of long reed flutes and a timber drum—all found in tombs dated between the age of Abraham and that of Moses.

Beating the Bakers.

"Oh, I am almost tired to death," said the woman who spends half her time addressing club meetings. "Our political economy club has been in session all day passing resolutions and drawing up petitions demanding a law regulating the price of bread. Only think! Three dollars' worth of flour costs, when baked into bread, $13. It's outrageous. We'll soon all be bankrupt. The bakers must be made to feel the power of the law. You should have been at the meeting."

"I couldn't come, I was too busy," said the calmed woman.
"Busy on a club day? What at?"
"Baking bread," said the calmed woman.

Origin of the Word Academy.

Academeus was a wealthy Greek of Athens who lived several hundred years before the birth of Christ. Among his possessions was a beautiful grove, where young men used to congregate and listen to the teachings of wise men, such as Plato and Socrates. This developed into the school of modern times, and these modern schools take their name "academy" from the old Greek Academeus. The real meaning of the word academy is a school for boys.

Colliding With a Planet.

Our small earth is not absolutely safe from collision with bodies in space, but is safe from collision with any planet in the solar system and with the sun. To be hit by a planet either the earth or the planet must leave its orbit. This is impossible, and it is also impossible that the earth can leave its orbit and fall to the sun. The earth is being hit by millions of meteors daily, from the size of pin heads up to the largest, several hundred tons in weight.

determine their movements, but science refuses to admit that they can possess the analogue of a brain. But I believe I have shown that this possibility theoretically does not offer the least doubt. Automats can be made as complicated as one may wish."

Daguerre.

The inventor of the process of photography was Louis Daguerre, born at Cormeilles, France, in 1789. He was first employed painting scenes for the theatre, and while thus at work he discovered the method of representing night and day by the illumination of a transparent canvas painted on both sides. This was in 1822, but as early as 1814 Nicéphore Niepce had made some experiments of photography on metal. In 1826 he and Daguerre became partners, but in a few years the former died, leaving Daguerre to develop the remarkable art. The French Government gave the medal of the Legion of Honor to the inventor of the daguerreotype.

Two Storey Lake In Mexico.

One of the wonders of Mexico is the salt producing lake near Salinas station on the Tampico division of the Mexican Central Railway, 72 miles west of San Luis Potosi. It may well be termed a two storey lake, for at times there is a lake of fresh water overlying the salt lake. A water tight roof of green mud separates the fresh from the salt water. For a large part of the year there is no fresh water lake there. The sun dries it up soon after the rainy season is over. The salt secured from this lake goes all over Mexico. The lake has been worked about 65 years. The whole town of 5,000 people makes its living from the salt.

Giving Birds a Chance.

If man's instinct as a hunter could have been diverted from birds to insects the history of economic affairs, and especially of agriculture, would have been very different. But he has continued killing birds, not merely as a sport, but often for greedy traffic, long after the need to do so passed away. The time has come when governments must take serious thought for the protection of bird life in order that plant life on which human sustenance depends may not be jeopardized and destroyed.

"So you are expected to do a kind act every day?"
"Yes," replied the Boy Scout.

exactly meet the need which so often arises in every family for a medicine to open up and regulate the bowels. Not only are they effective in all cases of Constipation, but they help greatly in breaking up a Cold or La Grippe by cleaning out the system and purifying the blood. In the same way they relieve or cure Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headaches, Rheumatism and other common ailments. In the fullest sense of the words Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are that permits only its glistening black eyes to be seen to the pigmented snake-like fish that is trapped and speared on the coast and in the rivers.

As soon as the eel has brought forth its first spawning of 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 eggs it dies, but just how its existence ends or why it should be cut off so short remains a mystery. One thing is certain, no adults come in from the sea, no adults remain in the streams.

The eel is a vertebrate animal which emerges from an egg less than one-twenty-fifth of an inch in diameter. It grows to a length of three inches in perhaps a year, and during that time is buffeted about on the high seas and drifts over a distance of 1,000 miles or more.

Yet during all this period the eel takes no food whatever and is doubtless incapable of doing so, owing to the unprepared condition of its digestive organs.—New York American.

CURIOUS MULTIPLICATION.

You Need Not Know the Table Beyond "Two Times Nine."

What! Multiply 343 by 177 without knowing the multiplication table beyond the "two times nine"? Yes. If you can multiply and divide by 2 you can get any product in the following simple way:

Put down the two numbers side by side and form a column under each by successively dividing by 2 in the first column and doubling the number in the second column. Discard all remainders as you divide and carry both columns in even rows until the last quotient is 1. Then cross out every line across the three columns that has an even number in the first column, add what remains in the second column and you have the product. In the following columns the numbers in parentheses are the ones to be discarded:

171	354	2
85	709	4
(42)	(1,416)	(8)
21	2,832	16
(10)	(5,664)	(32)
5	11,328	64
(2)	(22,656)	(128)
1	45,312	256
	60,711	343

The reason why this comes out so nicely may be explained by means of a third column, showing the successive powers of 2. The powers standing in the uncrossed lines will exactly account for the remainders that were rejected. Their sum is therefore equal to the multiplier, 343, and opposite each is the partial product equal to 177 times the corresponding power of 2.—Youth's Companion.

Passing of Old Houses.

Riders and walkers through the New England countryside and villages learn to look for the venerable houses, many of them centenarians twice over, which not only distinguish this region, but fit into its landscapes with a suitability which newer buildings somehow lack. As this interest grows the observer begins to notice that they are all too rapidly disappearing to give place to modern houses which are certainly no improvement in workmanship and architectural design, and not necessarily superior in comfort and convenience if the old houses are properly handled. In losing these ancient buildings we are losing not only parcels of history. We are losing quite as much a dignified and fitting style of domestic architecture which is all the more effective by being severely plain.—Boston Transcript.

Under the Daughters of the Empire.

Owing to the number of prize lists of County and School Fairs, and the space being required for other necessary purposes in our local press, at the moment, detailed accounts of contributions and donations of work, etc., from friends in town and country will not be given this week.

Space, however, has been requested for next week, in order to make suitable acknowledgements.

The committee above mentioned desire to call attention to the receipt this week of splendid and inspiring donations from Camden East, Yarker and Newburgh, particulars of which it is hoped to give later. The Committee made a shipment to Valcartier on Monday last, of a fine large case of soldiers comforts, consisting of Socks, Balaclava Caps, Mufflers, wristlets and "housewives," or mending kits—the personal and home touch being emphasized by written message of cheer and good wishes being attached to the various articles. The sending of such a box to our brave soldier boys, is an encouragement as well as an inspiration to our faithful workers.

A very successful work meeting was held at the headquarters room on Thursday last, which was largely attended, everyone enjoying the cup of tea, and the sociality engendered; a nice little sum resulting to add to the fund. This feature will be continued every Thursday afternoon until further notice.

ALLIES FORCING RETREAT ALL ALONG THE BATTLE LINE

Paris, Sept. 23.—Success seems about to crown the efforts of the allies to break through the German right and force a retreat all along the line. The official news from the front states that the Germans have been driven back ten miles on the left and that the general enveloping movement continues with success. As interpreted by military experts here, the allies have succeeded in pushing Gen. Von Kluck out of alignment with the balance of the German battle-front, and this will make it necessary for other German armies to fall back or take chances of being enveloped themselves in turn.

The losses, however, have been enormous. It is admitted that in the last ten days, three times as many French and British have been killed as in retirements towards Paris forts. It has been a desperate hand-to-hand fighting, and every foot of ground gained by the allies is at fearful cost. The only comforting note is the statement that the Germans are at least losing fully as many.

LIKELY RETIRING TOWARDS FRONTIER.

London, Sept. 23.—With the German right wing turned by the allies, the British military experts were today waiting word that the enemy has withdrawn to lines just inside of the northern French frontier. Although it is admitted the battle will probably the German forces have already rely last at least two more days, military experts believe part, at least, of tired to their new fortified positions along the Sambro.

THE LECTURE ON THE WAR.

Last Tuesday evening Mr. Frank Yeigh, of Toronto, delivered a lecture, illustrated by lantern views, on the present war, the proceed of which went to the general fund of the Red Cross Society.

When the Chairman called the meeting to order he first asked Mr. Roland Daly to sing "Rule Britannia" and the audience to join in the chorus. Mr. Daly was then called upon for a solo and sang "Long Live the King," in a delightful manner. He was most ably accompanied by Miss Luella Hall.

In introducing Mr. Yeigh, the chairman took occasion to make a few remarks with regard to the truly British manner in which the Empire has responded to its duty. He also endeavored to show the audience how fortunate Canada is in her geographical position, and strove to raise more enthusiasm, particularly among the men, in order that they might in every way within their power aid those who are fighting and suffering for us.

Mr. Yeigh gave a most instructive introduction to his lecture. By well chosen references to standard authorities he proved the contention that the war is a just one from the standpoint of the Allies. He then displayed a series of pictures which, from a National viewpoint, could hardly be improved. He covered the field very fully and the general comment after the lecture was upon the fact that he had been able to give so much information in such a short time. Space will not permit mentioning all the pictures but those of the departure of the Canadian boys from Toronto, the Valcartier Camp, the ships of the British Navy, the domestic scenes in Belgium and France, the destruction caused by modern siege guns and the ruins that now cover

The first in-tallment of articles for the soldiers at the front, along with $30 in cash, has been forwarded to the headquarters of the Red Cross Society in Toronto. Besides this a package of mitts, wristlets, and toques was sent to Valcartier.

The committee beg to thank the who so promptly responded to the appeal, and to say that another bale will be sent at an early date. Those having articles to send in are requested to do so as soon as possible. Donations of money are urgently required and will be thankfully received.

Our Millinery opening of Saturday attracted a large number of ladies who expressed themselves as delighted with the handsome display of beautiful creations from the leading center of fashion. For a number of years Doxee & Co. have occupied a commanding position for distinctive and smart millinery and the exhibit this season both as regards variety and quality is fully up to the high standard set in former years.

The artistic note is strongly pronounced in most of the hats, and there are very few, if any, shapes, which are too extreme to be generally coming, and to the appeal to the taste of the most discriminating wearer.

Large hats are shown in great variety.

Trimmings of flowers, mounts, ribbons, osprey of every descriptive. Small military shapes promise to be very popular for young ladies and Misses.

Children's hats in great variety. Infant's silk bonnets, little boys' beanie caps, black velvet sailors at $2 and $2.25.

Accompanying this letter was a list of articles particularly needed and it is thought advisable to continue our work for a while longer. The Council Chamber will be open Tuesday afternoon from 2 to 5 and Saturday morning from 10 to 12 and from 2 to 5 in the afternoon for sewing, distribution of material and receiving of finished articles.

In response to the above letter and the appeal for money published last week, the Finance Committee have decided to have the Wonderland entertainment earlier than at first arranged for and Saturday, October 3rd, has been the day selected. As the entire proceeds have been so kindly donated by Mr. Foster to the Red Cross funds, it is hoped the public will respond generously and a good sum will be realized.

Mr. Wm. J. Roach has lately painted his barn which adds very materially to its looks.

Last Saturday 12th inst, a John Deere manure spreader, was seen to go along this road. We understand the purchasers were Mr. W. S. and Henry Oliver.

The farmers along here have sown more fall wheat than usual this fall owing to the war countries requiring more food stuffs than is usually the case in times of peace.

Mr. Austin Kimmerly is busy these days digging and building a cellar across the road opposite his barn, preparatory for moving a house which he has purchased from Mr. Thos. Dowling on the foundation. We understand it is to be used as a tenant house. Mr. Lon Youngs of Deseronto is doing the Mason work.

Mr. Allen Oliver has lately put a new roof, galvanized iron, on his wagon house.

Duck hunting opened last week with the usual amount of hunters along the marshes, but the birds are reported as rather scarce this fall.

Owing to the dry summer, the potato crop is away below the average, some late planted crops however, are still growing and many turn out better than the earlier varieties.

Mr. Ed. Randall has also been improving his building by putting a new roof on his drive house.

The past two weeks is generally considered very favorable for ripening up the tomato crop, and our canning factory at the west end is doing a rushing business, as thousands of bushels are finding their way to the factory now.

Strictly Logical.

Prof. Sudbury, who was extremely nearsighted, went to the barber's sat down and allowed himself to be shaved. When the artist was done with him he did not move, and for awhile nobody disturbed him. But other customers began to arrive, and the chair was needed. The head barber, suspecting that his learned patron had fallen asleep, asked his boy to wake him. The professor heard him.

"No, my good man," he said, "I am not asleep. The fact is I am frightfully nearsighted. When I took my glasses off just now I was no longer able to see myself in the mirror opposite. Naturally I supposed I had already gone home."

Hadn't Been Taught.

Little Grace, who had recently entered school, brought home some pumpkin seed one day and told her mother that the teacher said that although the seed was white the pumpkin would be yellow.

"And what will the color of the vines be?" her mother asked.

Grace replied that the teacher had not taught her that yet.

"I know, dear, but we have pumpkin vines in our garden, and you must know what color they are."

"Oh, of course I do, mother, but we ain't supposed to know anything until we're taught," replied Grace convincingly.

Working Overtime.

Mr. Griffin had spent an anxious afternoon at the office and hurried home at an unusually early hour.

"How do you feel, dear? What did the doctor say?" he questioned his wife as she lay on a couch, her eye half closed.

"Oh, he asked me to put out my tongue," she murmured.

"Yes?"

"And after looking at it he said 'Overworked!'"

Mr. Griffin heaved an audible sigh of relief. "I have perfect faith in that doctor, Mabel," said he firmly "You will have to give it a rest."

The Distinguishing Mark.

"My wife has a twin sister who looks so much like her that you would not be able to tell them apart."

"I suppose it has become easy for you to do so?"

"Yes, but it wouldn't be if my wife showed the same respect for me as her sister does."

Fine Millinery Display.

Our Millinery opening of Saturday attracted a large number of ladies, who expressed themselves as delighted with the handsome display of beautiful creations from the leading centres of fashion. For a number of years Doxee & Co. have occupied a conspicuous position for distinctive and art millinery and the exhibit this time is fully up to the high standard set in former years.

The artistic note is strongly pronounced in most of the hats, and there are very few, if any, shapes, which are too extreme to be generally becoming, and to the appeal to the taste of the most discriminating wearer.

Large hats are shown in great variety. Trimmings of flowers, mounts, ribbons, and every description.
All military shapes promise to be very popular for young ladies and girls.

Children's hats in great variety.

Opposed to Church Begging, Pas- tor Russell Lauds Charity.

Church Support Not Charity—Missions Different—Charity a Privilege—Its Godlikeness—Wise and Unwise Charity—Charity's Reward, Present and Future.

PASTOR RUSSELL

August 30. —
Pastor C. T. Russell, widely known through his Photo-Drama of Creation, which is being seen by thousands everywhere—widely known, also, by his sermons in hundreds of newspapers, by his books and by his weekly Bible Studies, preached to-day from the text, "He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will He repay him again."—Proverbs 19:17.

The Pastor surmised that because he has preached for thirty-eight years without having ever taken up a collection or appealed for money in connection with his work, some may have reached the erroneous conclusion that he is opposed to charities. Nothing could be further from the truth. During his ministry many thousand dollars have passed through his hands—voluntary gifts from grateful souls, for the spread of the Glad Tidings of great joy.
Moreover, it is his conviction that no one could be an acceptable Christian unless he possessed the spirit of charity, benevolence, unless he really loved to give for the glory of God and the benefit of his fellows.

From the speaker's viewpoint, missionary enterprises might properly be considered charities—but not so Church enterprises. The Church, he claimed, is not a missionary society for the world's benefit, but an arrangement for the benefit of its members. Hence each member of this brotherhood should consider himself in duty bound to co-operate to the extent of his ability in providing for the necessary expenses connected with the meeting-place—light, janitorage, etc.—the blessings and comforts of which he enjoys.
Each should voluntarily contribute according to opportunity and appreciation of privileges. If the sum total be insufficient, less expensive quarters should be engaged as soon as possible.

The Pastor considers it wrong for a congregation to aspire to an expensive auditorium and general establishment beyond their means, and then to go outside to solicit money from the world, the flesh and the Devil. He declared that God never authorized such proceedings;
for as surely as it would be offensive to any right-minded person to have money solicited in his name, so must it be displeasing to the Almighty to have begging done in His name without His authority.

Apparent Loss a Real Gain.

Should any protest that if solicitations, collections, pew rents, fares, festivals, etc., were abandoned, all those beneficially endowed, the speaker replied that if this were the case, nevertheless the Church would gain respect and influence with the

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 21.—Wheat prices opened 1/4c to 1 1/4c higher; oats 1/4c to 1/2c higher, and flax 1/4c to 1/2c lower. Following the opening there were further advances in wheat and oats, influenced by the higher Liverpool prices for spot.
Later prices eased off considerably on the pressure of heavy offerings. The range in wheat prices up to noon was 2c to 2 1/2c.
At noon October was $1.11 1/2, December $1.12 1/2, and May $1.19 1/2. October oats were 49 1/2c, and December 49 1/2c. Trading was fairly active, and exporters were both buyers and sellers on today's market.
Wheat closed 1/4c to 1/2c lower; oats 1/4c to 1/2c lower. Flax prices showed extremely weak, and closed 5c to 5 1/2c cents lower.
In cash lines there was good trading in the early hours, but the demand was slow later for all grades. Millers and exporters bought moderately.

Cash grain closed—Wheat, 1/4c to 1c lower; oats, 1/4c lower; flax, 5 1/2c lower, and barley 2 1/2c higher for No. 4, others being unchanged.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21.—The outside demand for Manitoba spring wheat was better today, and as the prices bid were 8d to 6d per quarter higher, sales of a few loads of old crop were made to London and Dublin, but there was no enquiry for coarse grains. The local trade in oats continues quiet, the demand being only for small lots to fill actual wants, and prices show no change. In flour, the feeling is firm, with a fair amount of business doing for local account. A fairly active trade continues to be done in millfeed.

The butter market is weaker, and the finest creamery at the auction sale today sold at 27 1/2c. There is a fair enquiry for cheese from the cable, but the volume of business doing is small, owing to the uncertainty of making shipments. The exports for the week were 33,273 boxes, as against 50,106 for the corresponding week last year.

Eggs were active and firm.

WHEN REGIMENTS RESIGNED.

Curragh Episode Is Not the First One In British History.

The cavalry crisis at the Curragh recalls how, in 1783, the old 77th Regiment, commanded by Col. Gordon, refused en bloc to go to India, and voiced their reasons in a barrack room song:—

If it were to fight with France or Spain
With pleasure we would cross the Main;
But for like bullocks to be slain—
Our Highland blood abhors it.

The question of this wholesale resignation came before Parliament, and the regiment was ordered to be disbanded forthwith at Perth.

Another Scotch regiment, the Black Watch, being brought to London from Scotland in 1743, on the pretext that George II., never having seen a Highland regiment before, wished to inspect them, turned about and marched home when they found His Majesty not in London to meet them. He had left the previous night for Hanover. They accordingly believed themselves the victims of a trick to reduce the number of Stuart supporters in Scotland. They were overtaken by a superior force in the Midlands and forced to capitulate. The regiment as a whole was then banished to Flanders; 200 of the men—all of good family—were sent into exile,
and many were court-martialled, whilst three ring-leaders were shot on Tower Hill.

Another instance of a regiment's desire to be quit of service wholesale occurred in 1807, when 300 men, chiefly Irishmen, of the 28th Foot, stationed at Maldon, Essex, feigned blindness in order to procure their discharges and escape being sent abroad. They bluffed the doctors for a time by applying an irritating ointment to their eyes, declaring they had caught the disease from afflicted soldiers just home from Egypt. But the ruse was discovered, and the ringleaders were tried under the Mutiny Act.

MOTOR BATTERY COMPLETE.

Sifton's Corps at Ottawa Ready To Go to Valcartier.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22. — The Sifton automobile machine-gun battery, which has been organized at the capital, leaves to-day for Valcartier. The battery consists of 15 protected high-speed automobile frames, on which are mounted quick-firing guns, and about 150 men, the majority of whom are either trained chauffeurs or highly skilled mechanics. It is believed that the battery will be capable of doing deadly work when it goes into action. The detachment also includes high-power automobiles for recon-noitering capable of making about 50 miles an hour.

the Devil. He declared that God never authorized such proceedings; for as surely as it would be offensive to any right-minded person to have money solicited in his name, so must it be displeasing to the Almighty to have begging done in His name without His authority.

Apparent Loss a Real Gain.

Should any protest that if solicitations, collections, pew rents, fairs, festivals, etc., were abandoned, all churches would be closed, except those beneficially endowed, the speaker replied that if this were the case, nevertheless the Church would gain respect and influence with the world which would more than compensate. If one-half of the churches were to disorganize, doubtless the other half, rightly supported in accordance with the Divine precepts and the example of Jesus and His Apostles, would accomplish more good than would twice the number under present conditions.

To illustrate this conviction, the Pastor cited the fact that the Divine blessing has attended his own work. He admitted that the money passing through his hands is really as nothing compared with the large sum spent annually by the various denominations; and that the International Bible Students Association owns no valuable real estate and boasts of no large bank account. They use actively and economically in God's service whatever money comes voluntarily to them, never spending more than is in hand.

God blesses the work; unsolicited donations increase annually; and the activities incidental to the use of these funds now extend to all parts of the earth, preaching the Message of God's Love and opening eyes of understanding long blinded by creeds, philosophies and misunderstandings of God's Word.

Generosity Is Godlikeness.

In declaring generosity to be Godlikeness the Pastor would not be misunderstood to mean that gifts could purchase Divine favor and relationship. There is only one way into God's family—renunciation of sin, turning to righteousness, acceptance of Christ's redemptive work and full consecration to do God's will, even unto death. Only such spirit-begotten ones are Scripturally acknowledged as God's children. All others are called aliens, strangers to God and His promises.

But there are noble-minded souls who have not entered this narrow way and therefore are not children of God, but who naturally possess some of man's original Godlikeness. In practicing charity these are blessed in their own hearts and lives. While not under the provisions for the Church, nevertheless these are being benefited by their generous course in contributing to the relief of suffering, for the maintenance of widows, orphans, hospitals, etc. Under Messiah's Kingdom, when the world shall enter upon trial for life or death everlasting, these noble souls will be several steps in advance of others who have failed to develop this quality of benevolence, charity.

Dog Love.

"You can't dishearten the right kind of a dog," remarked the man on the car. "Cut off seven-eighths of his tail and he will try to wigwag his love with the remaining eighth."—Toledo Blade.

Put a little more in than you take out and your purse will soon fill.

TORONTO, Sept. 21.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 183 cars, comprising 3276 cattle, 650 hogs, 2234 sheep and lambs and 207 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice heavy steers sold by the load at $8.60 to $9, and one lot of seven extra choice steers were sold at $9.35; loads of good, $8.25 to $8.50; medium to good, $7.75 to $8.15; medium, $7.50 to $7.75; common to medium, $7.25 to $7.50; inferior half-cows, $6.50 to $7; choice cows, $6.75 to $7; good cows, $6.25 to $6.50; medium cows, $5.75 to $6; common cows, $5 to $4.50; choice bulls, $6.75 to $7.50; common bulls, $5 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

There was a fair supply, but quality was not up to the requirements of the demand. Choice steers, 800 to 900 lbs., sold at $7.25 to $7.50; good steers, 600 to 700 lbs., at $6.75 to $7; stockers at $5 to $6.50.

Milkers and Springers.

A moderate supply of milkers and springers sold at prices ranging from $60 to $95 each, and one extra choice cow at $110.

Veal Calves.

Receipts were light and prices very firm. Choice veal calves at $10 to $11; good at $8.50 to $9.50, medium at $7.50 to $8.50, common at $6.50 to $7.50, inferior at $5.50 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts were large. Sheep sold at steady prices, but lambs were easier and not all sold at the close of the market. Sheep, light ewes, $5.75 to $6.50; heavy ewes and rams, at $4 to $5; culls, $2.50 to $3; lambs, the bulk sold at $7.75 to $9, with a few at $8.25; culls, $6 to $7.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $8.25; and $8.90 f.o.b. cars at country points, and $9.50 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21.—At the Montreal stock yards west-end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 19 were 2600 cattle, 3500 sheep and lambs, 2700 hogs and 700 calves, while the offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 2100 cattle, 2500 sheep and lambs, 1600 hogs and 500 calves.

One of the features of the trade continues to be the very limited supply of good to choice butchers' cattle coming forward, which has created somewhat of a scarcity of these grades, and in consequence the tone of the market for such was stronger at an advance in price of 75c per 100 pounds as compared with a week ago. Another feature of the market was the liberal supply of canning stock offered, which had a depressing influence, and prices declined 25c to 50c per 100 pounds, but at this reduction some drovers refused to sell, and one of the principal dealers in this class of stock shipped ten carloads to the Buffalo market, while others sold bulls at $4.75 to $5 and cows at $3.75 to $4 per 100 pounds. There was a good demand from butchers and packers for the best grades of cattle, and at the above advance noted a fairly active trade was done. A few small lots of picked choice steers sold at $8.75 to $9, and full loads of good steers brought $8.25 to $8.50, but the bulk of the trading was done in cattle ranging in prices from $7 to $8 per 100 pounds.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, Sept. 21.—Cattle—Receipts, 6,400; slow; prime steers, $9.50 to $10; shipping, $8.60 to $9.25; butchers, $7.25 to $8.50; heifers, $6.25 to $8.25; cows, $4 to $7.50; bulls, $5 to $7.50; stockers and feeders, $6.25 to $7.75; stock heifers, $5.25 to $6.

Veals—Receipts, 1,000; active and steady; $5 to $12.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 17,600; active; heavy, $9.50 to $9.60; mixed and Yorkers, $8.60; pigs, $8.50 to $9; roughs, $5.25 to $5.50; stags, $6.50 to $7.75.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 19,400; sheep active; lambs dull; lambs, $5 to $8.40; yearlings, $4.50 to $7; wethers, $6.25 to $6.50; ewes, $2.50 to $5.75; sheep, mixed, $6 to $6.25.

German Paper Threatens.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The London newspapers yesterday quoted the German newspaper Tagliche Rundschau as declaring that Belgium bitterly will run the day she dared to oppose her mighty neighbor. Great Britain, the German newspaper also says, will pay dearly for her interference in this war by seeing the permanent establishment of a German naval base on the coast of Belgium.

The Pan-Germanic organ declares that the portions of Belgium now overrun by the German army will be permanently incorporated in the German Empire.

AMHERST ISLAND SCHOOL FAIR

The first Rural School Fair of the season was held at Stella, Amherst Island, on Friday, Sept. 18th. A crowd of over 400 attended. The exhibits began to arrive by 10 o'clock. The Amherst Island Women's Institute served a very nice lunch. The exhibits consisted of grains, roots, vegetables, fruits, cooking, and sewing, and were extremely good. Over 250 Rhode Island Red chickens were exhibited by the children.

Speeches were given by Reeve Glen, by Mr. Tregillus, President of the United Farmers' of Alberta, Calgary, by Messrs. Curran and Tregillus, of the Napanee Department of Agriculture, and local speakers. The School Fair was voted a grand success and preparations are already being made to hold a larger and better School Fair in 1915.

THE FIRST MONTH OF THE

From the Scientific American ember 12th, 1914.

At the opening of the war well understood (for a distinct German general had written it in a book) that the grand strategy Germany would be to concentrate flower of her army against the overwhelm and scatter them first two or three weeks of the invest Paris, and then turn Russia in an equally swift and ing overslaught. At the present ing, with the war over a month progress, nothing of the kind happened. The French and armies are intact and everywhere they have fallen back the line of forts and strongly ent ed positions, provided years France to meet the inevitable G attack; and for the past three they have not only presented, pregnable wall of defence, which the Germans have failed break; but in the rearward move to their present position, they fought a series of defensive battles selected and entrenched positions which in the theory that the are three to one against the attack force, must have cost the German army already not less than men in killed, wounded, and other disabled.

The Germans, it is true, have back the left wing of the allies; they have done this at an enormous military and moral cost. Their cost has been due to the fact that they found themselves opposed 100,000 professional soldiers, met during their seven years of service with the colors, had been so thoroughly drilled in practice at the rifle that they were crack marks which fact coupled with the traditional steadiness of British troops fire, enabled them, against odds between two and three to one, to a series of defensive actions in positions, from which they did a full execution upon the heavily-n columns of the Germans.

To the enormous losses in men, tailed in this flanking movement, be added the even more serious loss which Germany has incurred in bartering her national sense of in exchange for the opportunity sent by the undefended Belgian line to rush across the F border in overwhelming numbers. France and Germany had both guaranteed the neutrality of Belgium. France intended to stand by pledge is abundantly proved by fact that, when Germany marched through Belgium, France, in spite of the delay afforded by staunch Belgian resistance, had time to concentrate her troops in Northeastern France in sufficient numbers to check the German onslaught. Nothing that Count Bern-torff or any other apology the German breach of good faith say, can make the American I think that Germany believed it was intending to do that which herself has done. The facts absolutely against such a supposition. So little preparation had France to resist a German invasion of Belgium, that, had it not been for totally unexpected interposition England on behalf of Belgium the magnificent fight against overwhelming odds put up by the Belgian army, Germany would have been inside the very gates of Paris. Belgium, that, had it not been for totally unexpected interposition England on behalf of Belgium the magnificent fight against overwhelming odds put up by the Belgian army, Germany to-day would be inside the very gates of Paris.

The French line of defence stretched from Belfort to the southern limit the Belgian frontier. North of she believed that her defence consisted of a "sheet of paper" with the seal of the nation of herself and her German neighbor. The loss of France and Belgium of the fair lands the now being overrun with fire and by Germany, is, after all, trivial compared with the enormous loss of prestige suffered by the ruthless viceroy—a loss which no carefully educated sophistication of the diplomat the historian of the future can redeem.

The position of the allies today strategically and tactically very strong. Based on a line of fortifications running from Belfort on the south to Paris itself; with strong reserves in the rear and ample railroad communications serving the allied troops absolutely unbroken; with the choice of several French ports through which Great Britain can pour in her reserves, France her allies find themselves facing that are feeling the enormous strain of weeks of attack on entrench positions.

The probability is that the next talk of complete investment of Paris will never take place; and if not, and where is Germany to deliver crushing blow which is to put France under her heel, and release that million of men which Germany sends to meet the victorious Russian advance, and to stiffen her so worsted Austrian ally?

It is surprising that none of military critics have drawn attention to the fact, altogether unprecedented in great wars, that there has been breaking through and enveloping either side, German or French, of great battle line, two hundred forty miles long, in which, surely there must be some two-and-one millions of men engaged. To thinking, this fact is explained by absence from the field of operations that secrecy of movement which formerly rendered it possible to concentrate overwhelming strength against one or more portions of the enemy lines, and break through and envelop and capture a whole army at a time. We all remember what happened Metz and Sedan. Such catastrophes are not happening, and are not likely to happen, to-day.

Why? Unquestionably the change has been brought about by the wonderful efficient aeroplane scouting, of which so much is being done in the present war. The turning movement of German right wing is not a case point; for the success of the movement was due to the initial advantage gained by the violation of a treaty. It begins to look as though the general strategy of the allies is to accept initial advantage thus stolen by many and encourage the foe to breakthrough at an enormous sacrifice men to Paris, the allies meanly swinging into position with their wing pivoted upon the enormous defences of that city and their reliance upon the equally strong defence Belfort.

COUNT CALLS KAISER TYRANT

Will it not surprise you that I, a German born and a lover of the central Europe civilization, am a dissenter to the mad enterprise commanded by the present tyrant of Germany?

This despotic man gives to himself the air of a militarist, but to him his soldiers are only so many tons of flesh, which he exposes to the enemies' cannon to shield his own pathway to the victorious result he seeks. German soldiers do not know why they go to fight. They know only they are fed with horse flesh.

For a long time a mask has covered the real character of this vampire from the view of his own people and those in foreign countries. In Germany he connived to make friends in all classes, especially in the low and immoral quarters. His protections have been extended to such objectionable persons, which if I were to mention them here would cause the Angel of Honesty to cover his face.

I remember this Kaiser in Naples when, at the side of the proud King Humbert, he glanced with his oblique eyes and greedy expression at the evolutions of the splendid Italian fleet. I well remember his manner on that occasion, this pseudo-hero. While the King of Italy was keeping a sober correct and dignified composure, this killer of children and harmless citizens was continually busy in moving his sabre, fidgety in all directions and longing to possess that navy as his own.

The result of that trip to Italy was the intrigue with Austria by which Italy became an ally, with all to lose and nothing to gain. Why was Italy tricked into this alliance? Because the Kaiser wanted the strong Italian fleet and the powerful Italian armies. Italy awoke to find herself the ally of her old oppressors, the Austrians, and juggernaut in his massacres in Beland to one day aid this German giant, France, and even in England—Massacres which could have been averted, together with the commercial disasters that have resulted, by the civilized nations on this and the other side of the Atlantic. Happily, Italy has slipped away from that alliance.

By declaring themselves for the cause of justice the civilized nations would have paralyzed this evil. The Kaiser would have been compelled to think better of the business and go home. However this war ends he has irreparably ruined his country. Our Germany will be the worst, the poorest, the most abject place of the world, the great Kaiser.

with no hope of sympathy, thanks to But a great majority of well thinking Germans, including myself, think that to save Germany and other people from further ruin it is urgent to create a German Republic, with the party, in which the majority are annihilation of the hateful military worthy only of the titles of outlaws or inhuman monsters.

The German Republic may expect support from the best Governments where their flags stand for humanity, not stupid ambitions and cruelties.

The German people are good if well guided. Away with the barbaric militarism and Europe will be liberated from a horrible nest of reptiles. The republic, if there is need, will have soldiers proud but generous, and educated above all not to employ false trace flags, nor to shield themselves from their enemies with children and women.

The exclusion and banishment of the Hohenzollerns by the republic will

BOY SCOUTS ASSOCIATION.

Again has it been shown that the men of the British Empire are men of character, integrity and honour and again has it been shown that this same honour must be thoroughly inculcated within the hearts of the rising generation assisting them to become good, useful, honourable, upright citizens.

The principles of the Boy Scouts Association is already showing its mark upon the boys of this generation, and can be made of great help to the boys of any centre if only the men can be procured to lead.

The Secret of the Boy Scouts Association is that the leader merely organizes the work, suggests the ambition, and the boy has full liberty in accomplishing the object aimed at. Freedom without organized aim would be chaos.

The Scoutmaster initiates the ambition in the boy leaving him free to gain his objective in his own way; he does not instruct, he leads the boy on to learn for himself. Thus it is that as he successfully accomplishes one step after another the boy develops the calmness of confidence and self-reliance, and the cheerfulness of freedom and triumph.

There is good work to be accomplished in any community if only the men can be induced to lead; to give a few hours each week on behalf of the boys. It is a noble work to help mould the boys into good citizens for Canada.

It is a work that calls for men on the firing line under the banner of good Citizenship. Reader will you give us Men?

BETTER FEELING IN THE TRADE

That the feeling in the trade is very Fairbairn said he did not anticipate much more assured than it was four cutting down one hour of labor or weeks ago is the opinion of Mr. R. D. dismissing one employee or reducing Fairbairn, president of U. P. E. C. was as a result of the fact against such a supposition. A little preparation had France made to resist a German invasion through Belgium, that, had it not been for the totally unexpected interposition of England on behalf of Belgium, and the magnificent fight against overwhelming odds put up by the small Belgian army, Germany to-day would be inside the very gates of Paris.

The French line of defence stretched from Belfort to the southern limits of the Belgian frontier. North of that it is believed that her defence consisted of a "sheet of paper" with the solemn threat thereon of herself and her great German neighbor. The loss of France and Belgium of the fair lands that are now being overrun with fire and sword by Germany, is, after all, trivial compared with the enormous loss of moral prestige suffered by the ruthless invader—a loss which no carefully worded sophistication of the diplomat or the historian of the future can ever deem.

The position of the allies to-day is strategically and tactically very strong, based on a line of fortifications reaching from Belfort on the south almost to Paris itself; with strong reserves in the rear and ample railroad communications serving the allied army on interior lines; with the spirit of the troops absolutely unbroken; and with the choice of several French sectors through which Great Britain can pour in her reserves, France and her allies find themselves facing foes that are feeling the enormous strain of weeks of attack on entrenched positions.

The probability is that the much-lacked of complete investment of Paris will never take place; and if not, how idly where is Germany to deliver that crushing blow which is to put France under her heel, and release that half million of men which Germany must need to meet the victorious Russian advance, and to stiffen her sorely-ordered Austrian ally?

It is surprising that none of the military critics have drawn attention to the fact, altogether unprecedented in great wars, that there has been no eaking through and enveloping of the side, German or French, of this battle line, two hundred and forty miles long, in which, surely, there must be some two-and-one-half millions of men engaged. To our thinking, this fact is explained by the sense from the field of operation of the secrecy of movement which formally rendered it possible to concentrate overwhelming strength against one or more portions of the enemy's line, and break through and envelope and capture a whole army at a time. We all remember what happened at Metz and Sedan. Such catastrophes are not happening, and are not likely to happen, to-day.

Why? Unquestionably the change has been brought about by the wonderfully efficient aeroplane scouting, of which much is being done in the present war. The turning movement of the German right wing is not a case in point; for the success of the movement was due to the initial advantage gained by the violation of a treaty, begins to look as though the grand strategy of the allies is to accept the tactical advantage thus stolen by Germany and encourage the foe to break through at an enormous sacrifice of men to Paris, the allies meanwhile slipping into position with their left flank pivoted upon the enormous trenches of that city and their right on the equally strong defences of Belfort.

The German republic may expect support from the best Governments where their flags stand for humanity, not stupid ambitions and cruelties. The German people are good if well guided. Away with the barbaric militarism and Europe will be liberated from a horrible nest of reptiles. The republic, if there is need, will have soldiers proud but generous, and educated above all not to employ false truce flags, nor to shield themselves from their enemies with children and women.

The exclusion and banishment of the Hohenzollerns by the republic will purify the conscience of the Germans, stained by the sorrows they were induced to inflict.

I am leaving my country horrified by the barbarism inflicted upon humanity by this ruler. I must rest my brain. I will return to Germany when governed by a republic. But I will work for it.

P.S.—I have managed to translate this in Amsterdam into English. I will post it in a town where I will be sure it reaches you. I beg, you, sir, to publish it in your well credited journal. You will do it for the justice and for the right of the people of Germany, and for humanity. Accept my hearty, anticipated thanks.

Steam-Dried Hay Now.

Each year finds the farmer more of a mechanic, as machine after machine appears to take the place of the decreasing supply of manual labor. The up-to-date farm now has its machine shop and farmer mechanic. The farmer complains that for five years past he has been obliged constantly to purchase new labor-saving machinery.

On the other hand, had it not been for these new inventions many would have been obliged to go out of business. The latest thing is steam-cured hay, which makes the farmer independent of cloudy or rainy weather in haying time. The green grass is hauled to the hay factory, unloaded at one end of the plant, and 30 minutes later emerges at the other end perfectly cured, ready for the barn or bale press.

In case of rain a canvas cover insures arrival at the barn without wetting. The farmer has about given up his time-honored trip to the grist-mill, and here comes the hay mill. Frequent showers make good grass, but much of this is ruined in the process of sun-drying. The steam drier is independent of weather, and, moreover, turns out a better product, and can work nights.

BETTER FEELING IN THE TRADE

That the feeling in the trade is very much more assured than it was four weeks ago is the opinion of Mr. R. D. Fairbairn, president of R. D. Fairbairn Company, Limited, manufacturers of ladies' outer garments and fancy dry goods.

Mr. Fairbairn believes the manufacturers of Canada as a class have largely in their own hands the matter of whether there will be good business for Canadian factories. "The business is there," said Mr. Fairbairn "if the manufacturers will only get after it. The depression in trade which was in force before the war has certainly not increased since the war began; and, on the whole, manufacturers can be assured of good business, provided they do two things—advertise and push the selling department to the limit."

Referring to his own business, Mr.

Fairbairn said he did not anticipate cutting down one hour of labor or dismissing one employee or reducing wages as a result of the war. On the contrary, the present staff of upwards of 200 is being slightly increased. This continued activity is not due to any removal of competition, but to the continued demand throughout the country.

"We are absolutely confident," said Mr. Fairbairn, "that with the business to be done at home there is absolutely no excuse for any manufacturer of garments curtailing his output. People have to be clothed; our farmers are getting big money for their produce; and the $450,000,000 represented by our export business for this year must be circulated. The general trade of the country must of necessity not only hold its own, but advance."

CONTINUED EMPLOYMENT IN THE TEN PENMAN MILLS

The industrial conditions created by the war will stimulate activity in the ten mills operated by Penman's Limited, manufacturers of hosiery, underwear, blankets, etc. In summing up the situation, Mr. I. Bonner, general manager of the company said:

"Prospects for the hosiery business look bright. The fact of the German and Austrian competition being cut off is bound to make a greater demand for the staple lines made by Canadian manufacturers. Penman's Limited have already felt the extra demand, which will undoubtedly increase."

"The underwear trade is holding steadily, compared with what it has been for the past eight months. Of course, the demand is still below what it has been in previous years, but we do not anticipate any further falling off."

There are 2,300 employees in the ten mills of Penman's Limited, and these employees are assured of continued employment. Indeed, if the extra demand for hosiery continues, as is likely to be the case, the staff in the hosiery department will have to be increased.

The continued operation of the Penman mills will mean the circulation of a million dollars a year in wages to Canadian employees. It will mean much more than that, because the finished product of a year's operation of these mills is worth $4,500,000, and much of the difference between that amount and the payroll of $1,000,000 will be spent in Canada in the purchase of raw material, in factory supplies, in freight and cartage, etc.

GOING AFTER GERMANY'S TRADE WITH GREAT BRITAIN

One of the smaller manufacturing concerns of Canada—R. E. Thorne & Co., of Montreal and Valleyfield—has adopted an aggressive policy in view of present industrial conditions that might well be emulated by other and larger Canadian manufacturing industries.

This company operated the Canadian Bronze Powder Works, which supply most of the Canadian consumption of bronze powders, gold paints, and bronze liquids, as well as a portion of the demand for these articles in the United Kingdom. Germany has been the principal competitor of this company both in Canada and in the United Kingdom, and the company is making strenuous efforts to secure the trade in both countries that was Germany's. While one member of the firm remains in Canada to direct these efforts in this country, the other member is now on the Atlantic en route to Great Britain, to take charge of an aggressive campaign there. In the meantime, in order to cope with the increased orders that are already coming in, double shifts are being employed in the company's plant at Valleyfield. If the expectations of the company regarding the extension of its business in the United Kingdom are realized further increases in its staff will be made.

Interviewed just before sailing for Great Britain, Mr. R. E. Thorne said: "We have many inquiries from all parts of Great Britain for our products, and we expect that our business will be very much increased on this account. We are making arrangements, should this business warrant it, to increase our factory, and we expect to retain a good share of this trade."

This young Canadian industry has set some of its elders a good example in the matter of ensuring a supply of raw materials also. Until a few years ago the Canadian Bronze Powder Works was dependent upon Europe for most of its raw materials. The efforts of the company were directed to the securing of this raw material in Canada. As a result much of it is now being made in the company's plant at Valleyfield, and practically all raw material required is produced in Canada. Thus this Canadian industry is practically self-contained, which is a matter of great advantage under present conditions.

The Story of Waitstill Baxter

By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN

Copyright, 1915, by Kate Douglas Wiggin

"It's too bad. I'm sorry. But, after all, you couldn't help it."

"No, but we should always look round everywhere when we're cutting—that's what Ivory says. He says folks shouldn't use edged tools till they're old enough not to fool with 'em."

And Rodman looked so wise and old fashioned for his years that Patty did not know whether to kiss him or cry over him as she said: "Ivory's always right. And, now, goodbye. I must go this very minute. Don't forget the picnic."

"I won't!" cried the boy, gazing after her, wholly entranced with her bright beauty and her kindness. "Say, I'll bring something, too—white oak acorns, if you like 'em. I've got a big bagful up attic!"

Patty sped down the long lane, crept under the bars and flew like a lapwing over the highroad.

"If father was only like any one else things might be so different!" she sighed, her thoughts running along with her feet. "Nobody to make a home for that poor lonesome little boy and that poor lonesome big Ivory. I am sure that he is in love with Waitstill. He doesn't know it. She doesn't know it. Nobody does but me, but I'm clever at guessing. I was the only one that surmised Jed Morrill was going to marry again. I should almost like Ivory for myself, he is so tall and handsome, but of course he can never marry anybody. He is too poor and has his mother to look after. I wouldn't want to take him from Waity, though, and then perhaps I couldn't get him anyway. If I couldn't, he'd be the only one! I have never tried yet, but I feel in my bones, somehow, that I could have any boy in Edgewood or Riverboro by just crooking my forefinger and beckoning to him. I wish—I wish they were different! They don't make me want to beckon to them! My forefinger just stays straight and doesn't feel like crooking! There's Cephas Cole, but he's as stupid as an owl. I don't want a husband that keeps his mouth wide open whenever I'm talking, no matter whether it's sense or nonsense. There's Phil Perry, but he likes Ellen, and besides, he's too serious for me. And there's Mark Wilson, he's the best dressed and the only one that's been to college. He looks at me all the time in meeting and asked me if I wouldn't take a walk some Sunday afternoon. I know he planned Ellen's party hoping I'd be there! Goodness gracious, I do believe that is his horse coming behind me! There's no other in the village that goes at such a gait!"

It was, indeed, Mark Wilson, who always drove, according to Aunt Abby

"No, I'd rather not drive," she said. "I'd be afraid of this horse and, anyway, I must get out this very minute—yes, I really must. If you told Nero I can just slip down between the wheels. You needn't help me."

Mark alighted notwithstanding her objections, saying gallantly, "I don't miss this pleasure, not by a jugful! Come along! Jump!"

Patty stretched out her hands to be helped, but Mark forestalled her by putting his arms around her and lifting her down. A second of time only was involved, but in that second he held her close and kissed her warm cheek, her cheek that had never felt the touch of any lips but those of Waitstill. She pulled her sunbunnet over her flaming face, while Mark, with a gay smile of farewell, sprang into the wagon and gave his horse a free rein.

Patty never looked up from the road, but walked faster and faster, her heart beating at breakneck speed. It was a changed world that spun past her. Fright, triumph, shame, delight, gratified vanity swam over her in turn.

A few minutes later she heard once more the rumble of wheels on the road. It was Cephas Cole driving toward her over the brow of Saco hill. "He'll have seen Mark," she thought, "but he can't know I've talked and driven with him. Ugh! how stupid and common he looks!"

"I heard your father blowin' the supper horn jest as I come over the bridge," remarked Cephas, drawing up in the road. "He stood in the doorway blowin' like Bedlam. I guess you're late to supper."

"I'll be home in a few minutes," said Patty. "I got delayed and am a little behindhand."

"I'll turn right round if you'll git in and lemme take you back along a piece, it'll save you a good five minutes," begged Cephas abjectly.

"All right, much obliged, but it's against the rules and you must drop me at the foot of our hill and let me walk up."

"Certainly; I know the deacon, 'n' I ain't huntin' for trouble any more'n you be, though I'd take it quick enough if you jest give me leave! I ain't no coward, an' I could tackle the deacon tomorrow if so be I had anything to ask him."

This seemed to Patty a line of conversation distinctly to be discouraged under all the circumstances, and she tried to keep Cephas on the subject of his daily tasks and his mother's rheumatism until she could escape from his overappreciative society.

"How do you like my last job?" he inquired as they passed his father's house. "Some think I've got the ell a little dited too yaller. Folks that ain't never handled a brush allers think they can mix paint better 'n them that knows their trade."

"If your object was to have everybody see the ell a mile away you've succeeded," said Patty cruelly. She finished even in thought. "I don't think I can be. Men must surely say something and not take it for granted, you are in love with them and want to marry them. It is what they say when they ask that I should like, much better than being married, when I'm only just past seventeen. I wish Mark was a little different. I don't like his careless ways! He admires me, I can tell that by the way he looks, but he admires himself just as much and expects me to do the same. Still, I suppose none of them are perfect, and girls have to forgive lots of little things when they are engaged. Mother must have forgiven a good many things when she took father. Anyway, Mark is going away for a month on business, so I shan't have to make up my mind just yet!" Here sleep descended upon the slightly puzzled, but on the whole delightfully complacent little creature, bringing her most alluring and untrustworthy dreams.

The dear Innocent had indeed no need of haste. Young Mr. Marquis de Lafayette Wilson—Mark for short—was not in the least a gay deceiver or ruthless breaker of hearts, and so far as known no scalps of village beauties were hung to his belt. He was a likable, light weight young chap, as indolent and pleasure loving as the strict customs of the community would permit, and a kiss, in his mind, most certainly never would lead to the altar, else he had already been many times a bridegroom. Miss Patience Baxter's maiden meditations and uncertainties and perplexities, therefore, were decidedly premature. She was a natural born, unconsciously artistic, highly expert and finished coquette. She was all this at seventeen, and Mark at twenty-four was by no means a match for her in this field of effort yet. But sometimes in getting her victim into the net the coquette loses her balance and falls in herself. There wasn't a bit of harm in Marquis de Lafayette, but he was extremely agile in keeping out of nets.

Waitstill was restless, too, that night, although she could not have told the reason. She opened her window at the back of the house and leaned out. The evening was mild, with a soft wind blowing. She could hear the full brook dashing through the edge of the wood lot and even the "kerchug" of an occasional bullfrog. There were great misty stars in the sky, but no moon.

There was no light in Aunt Abby Cole's kitchen, but a faint glimmer shone through the windows of Uncle Bart's joiner's shop, showing that the old man was either having an hour of peaceful contemplation with no companion but his pipe or that there might be a little group of privileged visitors, headed by Jed Morrill, busily discussing the affairs of the nation.

Waitstill felt troubled and anxious tonight, bruised by the little daily torments that lessened her courage but never wholly destroyed it. Any one who believed implicitly in heredity might have been puzzled, perhaps, to account for her. He might fantastically picture her as making herself out of her ancestors, using a free hand, picking and choosing what she liked best, with due care for the effect of combinations; selecting here and there and modifying, if advisable, a trait of Grandpa or Grandma Foxwell, of Great Uncle or Great Aunt Baxter; borrowing qualities lavishly from her own gentle born and gently bred mother and carefully avoiding her respected father's stock, except perhaps to take a dash of his pluck and an ounce of an eye, for Uncle Bart was as quick as the child and dragged her out of the imminent danger with no worse harm done than a good scorching.

He led the little creature up the hill to explain matters and protect her from a scolding. She still held the dog against her heaving breast, saying, between the sobs: "I couldn't let m Debby burn up! I couldn't. Unc! Bart, she's got nobody but me! Is m dress scorched so much I can't wear it? You'll tell father how it was, Unc! Bart, won't you?"

Debby bore the marks of her adventure longer than her owner, for she had been longer in the fire, but stained and defaced as she was, she was never replaced and remained the only doll of Waitstill's childhood. At this very moment she lay softly and safely in a bureau drawer ready to be lifted out, some time, Waitstill fancied and shown tenderly to Patty's children. Of her own possible children she never thought. There was but one man in the world who could ever be the father of them, and she was separated from him by every obstacle that could divide two human beings.

Village "aunts" and "uncles" were selected to that relationship by the common consent of the community, their fitness being established by age, by decided individuality or eccentricity of character, by uncommon loveliness or by the possession of an abundant wit and humor. There was no formality about the thing. Certain women were always called "Aunt Skie," or "Aunt Hitty," or what no while certain men were distinguished as "Uncle Rish," or "Uncle Pel," with out previous arrangement or the consent of the high contracting parties.

Such a couple were Cephas Cole's father and mother, Aunt Abby and Uncle Bart. Bartholomew Cole's trade was that of a joiner. As for Aunt Abby, it can only be said that she made a trades her own by sovereign right of investigation, and what she did not know about her neighbor's occupation was unlikely to be discovered on this side of Jordan. One of the villagers declared that Aunt Abby and her neighbor, Mrs. Abel Day, had argued for an hour before they could make bargain about the method of disseminating a certain important piece of news, theirs by exclusive right of discovery and prior possession. Mrs. Day offered to give Mrs. Cole the privilege of Saco hill and Aunt Betty Jack's, she herself to take Guide Board and Tow House hills. Aunt Abby quickly proved the injustice of this decision, saying that there were twice as many families living in Mrs. Day's chosen territory as there were in that allotted to her, so the river road to Milliken's mills was grudgingly awarded to Aunt Abby by way of compromise, and the ladies started on what was a tour of mercy in those days—the furnishing of a subject of discussion for long, quiet evenings.

Uncle Bart's joiner's shop was at the foot of Guide Board hill on the Riverboro side of the bridge, and it was the pleasantest spot in the whole village. The shop itself had a cheery look, with its weather stained shingles, its small square windows and its hospitable door, half as big as the front side of the building. The step was an old millstone too worn for active service and the piles of chips and shavings on each side of it had been there for so many years that sweet williams, clove pinks and purple phlox were growing body see the en a time away from succeeded," said Patty cruelly. She when whenever I'm talking, no matter whether it's sense or nonsense. There's Phil Perry, but he likes Ellen, and besides, he's too serious for me. And there's Mark Wilson, he's the best dressed and the only one that's been to college. He looks at me all the time in meeting and asked me if I wouldn't take a walk some Sunday afternoon. I know he planned Ellen's party hoping I'd be there! Goodness gracious, I do believe that is his horse coming behind me! There's no other in the village that goes at such a gait!"

It was, indeed, Mark Wilson, who always drove, according to Aunt Abby Cole, "as if he was goin' for a doctor." He caught up with Patty almost in the twinkling of an eye, but she was ready for him. She had taken off her sunbonnet just to twirl it by the string, she was so warm with walking, and in a jiffy she had lifted the clustering curls from her ears, tucked them back with a single expert movement and disclosed two coral pendants just the color of her ear tips and her glowing cheeks.

"Hello, Patty!" the young man called in brusque country fashion as he reined up beside her. "What are you doing over here? Why aren't you on your way to the party? I've been over to Limington and am breaking my neck to get home in time myself."

"I am not going. There are no parties for me," said Patty plaintively.

"Not going! Oh, I say, what's the matter? It won't be a bit of fun without you. Ellen and I made it up expressly for you, thinking your father couldn't object to a candy pull."

"I can't help it. I did the best I could. Waitstill always asks father for me, but I wouldn't take any chances today, and I spoke to him myself. Indeed, I almost coaxed him."

"He's a regular old skinfint," cried Mark, getting out of the wagon and walking beside her.

"You mustn't call him names," Patty interposed, with some dignity. "I call him a good many myself, but I'm his daughter."

"You don't look it," said Mark admiringly. "Come and have a little ride, won't you?"

"Oh, I couldn't possibly, thank you. Some one would be sure to see us, and father's so strict."

"There isn't a building for half a mile. Just jump in and have a spin till we come to the first house; then I'll let you out, and you can walk the rest of the way home. Come, do, and make up to me a little for my disappointment. I'll skip the candy pull if you say the word."

It was an incredibly brief drive at Mark's rate of speed and as exciting and blissful as it was brief and dangerous, Patty thought. Did she imagine it or did Mark help her into the wagon differently from—old Dr. Perry, for instance?

The fresh breeze lifted the gold thread of her curls and gave her cheeks a brighter color, while her breath came fast through her parted lips and her eyes sparkled at the unexpected, unaccustomed pleasure. She felt so grown up, so conscious of a new power, as she sat enthroned on the little wagon seat (Mark Wilson always liked his buggies "courtin' size," so the neighbors said) that she was almost courageous enough to agree to make a royal progress through the village—almost, but not quite.

"Come on, let's shake the old tabbies up and start 'em talking, shall we?" Mark suggested. "I'll give you the reins and let Nero have a flick of the whip."

"Mother says that two rooms are big enough to set up housekeeping in."

never flung the poor boy a civil word for fear of getting something warmer than civility in return.

"It'll tone down," Cephas responded, rather crestfallen. "I wanted a good, bright, lastin' shade. 'T won't look so yaller when father lets me paint the house to match, but that won't be till next year. He makes fun of the yaller color same as you; says a home's something you want to forget when you're away from it. Mother says the two rooms of the ell are big enough for somebody to set up housekeepin' in. What do you think?"

"I never think," returned Patty, with a tantalizing laugh. "Good night, Cephas; thank you for giving me a lift!"

CHAPTER VI.

"What dreams may come."

SUPPER was over and the work done at last. The dishes washed, the beans put in soak, the hens shut up for the night, the milk strained and carried down cellar. Patty went up to her little room with the one window and the slanting walls, and Waitstill followed and said good night. Her father put out the lights, locked the doors and came up the creaking stairs. There was never any talk between the sisters before going to bed, save on nights when their father was late at the store, usually on Saturdays only, for the good talkers of the village, as well as the gossips and loafers, preferred any other place to swap stories than the bleak atmosphere provided by old Foxy at his place of business.

Patty could think in the dark. Her healthy young body lying not uncomfortably on the bed of corn husks, and the patchwork comforter drawn up under her chin, she could think, but for the first time she could not tell her thoughts to Waitstill. She had a secret, a dazzling secret, just like Ellen Wilson and some of the other girls who were several years older. Her afternoon's experience loomed as large in her innocent mind as if it had been an elopement.

"I hope I'm not engaged to be married to him, even if he did"—The sentence was too tremendous to be never wholly destroyed. Any one who believed implicitly in heredity might have been puzzled, perhaps, to account for her. He might fantastically picture her as making herself out of her ancestors, using a free hand, picking and choosing what she liked best, with due care for the effect of combinations; selecting here and there and modifying, if advisable, a trait of Grandpa or Grandma Foxwell, of Great Uncle or Great Aunt Baxter; borrowing qualities lavishly from her own gentle born and gently bred mother and carefully avoiding her respected father's stock, except perhaps to take a dash of his pluck and an ounce of his persistence. Jed Morrill remarked of Deacon Baxter once, "When Old Foxy wants anything he'll wait till hell freezes over afore he'll give up." Waitstill had her father's firm chin, but there the likeness ended. The proud curve of her nostrils, the clear, well opened eye with its deep fringe of lashes, the earnest mouth, all these came from the mother who was little more than a dim memory.

Waitstill disdained any vague, dreary, colorless theory of life and its meaning. She had joined the church at fifteen, more or less because other girls did and the parson had persuaded her, but out of her hard life she had somehow framed a courageous philosophy that kept her erect and uncrushed, no matter how great her difficulties. She had no idea of bringing a poor, weak, dragged soul to her Maker at the last day, saying, "Here is all I have managed to save out of what you gave me!"

Patty slept sweetly on the other side of the partition, the contemplation of her twopenny triumphs bringing a smile to her childish lips, but even so a good heart was there (still perhaps in the process of making), a quick wit, ready sympathy, natural charm; plenty, indeed, for the stronger sister to cherish, protect and hold precious, as she did with all her mind and soul.

There had always been a passionate loyalty in Waitstill's affection, wherever it had been bestowed. Uncle Bart delighted in telling an instance of it that occurred when she was a child of five. Maine had just separated amicably from her mother, Massachusetts, and become an independent state. It was in the middle of March, but there was no snow on the ground and the village boys had built a bonfire on a plot of land near Uncle Bart's joiner's shop. There was a large gathering in celebration of the historic event and Waitstill crept down the hill with her homemade rag doll in her arms. She stood on the outskirts of the crowd, a silent, absorbed little figure clad in a shabby woolen coat, with a blue knit hood framing her rosy face. Deborah, her beloved, her only doll, was tightly clasped in her arms, for Debby, like her parent, had few pleasures and must not be denied so great a one as this. Suddenly one of the thoughtless young scamps in the group, wishing to create a new sensation and add to the general excitement, caught the doll from the child's arms and running forward with a wild warwhoop, flung it into the flames. Waitstill did not lose an instant. She gave a scream of anguish and without giving any warning of her intentions, probably without realizing them herself, she dashed through the little crowd into the bonfire and snatched her cherished offspring from the burning pile. The whole thing was over in the twinkling of an eye. The subject of discussion for long, quiet evenings.

Uncle Bart's joiner's shop was at the foot of Guide Board hill on the Rivboro side of the bridge, and it was the pleasantest spot in the whole village. The shop itself had a cheery look, with its weather stained shingles, its square windows and its hospital door, half as big as the front side of the building. The step was an old millstone too worn for active service and the piles of chips and shavings each side of it had been there for many years that sweet williams, clover and purple phlox were growing in among them in the most irresponsible fashion, while a morning glory vine had crept up and curled around a long handled rake that had been standing against the front of the house since early spring. There was an air of cozy and amiable disorder about the place that would have invited friendly confabulation even had not Uncle Bart's white head, honest, ruddy face and smiling welcome coaxed you in before you were aware. A fine Noddy apple tree shaded the side window and underneath it reposed all summer a bright blue sleigh, for Uncle Bart always described himself as being "plagued for shed room" and the things as he liked at the shop, having a "p'ison neat" wife who did exact the opposite at his house.

The seat of the sleigh was all white now with scattered fruit blossoms, a one of Waitstill's earliest remembrances was of going downhill with

"A shop or a barn has saved many a man's life and reason."

Patty toddling at her side, of Uncle Bart's lifting them into the sleigh and permitting them to sit there and eat the ripe red apples that had fallen from the tree. Uncle Bart's son Cephas (Patty's secret adorer), was painter by trade and kept his pots and brushes in a little outhouse at the back, while Uncle Bart himself stood every day behind his long joiner's bench almost knee deep in shavings. How the children loved to play with the white, satiny rings, making an eye, for Uncle Bart was as quick as the child and dragged her out of the imminent danger with no worse harm than a good scorching.

He led the little creature up the hill to explain matters and protect her from a scolding. She still held the doll against her heaving breast, saying, between the sobs: "I couldn't let my ebby burn up! I couldn't. Uncle art, she's got nobody but me! Is my dress scorched so much I can't wear it? or'll tell father how it was, Uncle art, won't you?"

Debby bore the marks of her adventure longer than her owner, for she had been longer in the fire, butained and defaced as she was, she as never replaced and remained the dolly doll of Waitstill's childhood. At this very moment she lay softly and safely in a bureau drawer ready to be taken out, some time, Waitstill fancied, and shown tenderly to Patty's children. Of her own possible children she never thought. There was but one man in the world who could ever be a father of them, and she was separated from him by every obstacle that could divide two human beings.

Village "aunts" and "uncles" were attached to that relationship by the common consent of the community, their fitness being established by great age, by decided individuality or eccentricity of character, by uncommon loveliness or by the possession of an abundant wit and humor. There was a formality about the thing. Certain women were always called "Aunt Sue," or "Aunt Hitty," or what not, while certain men were distinguished as "Uncle Rish," or "Uncle Pel," without previous arrangement or the consent of the high contracting parties. Such a couple were Cephas Cole's father and mother, Aunt Abby and Uncle Art. Bartholomew Cole's trade was that of a joiner. As for Aunt Abby's, she can only be said that she made all her own by sovereign right of investigation, and what she did not know about her neighbor's occupations was unlikely to be discovered on this side of Jordan. One of the villagers declared that Aunt Abby and her neighbor, Mrs. Abel Day, had argued for an hour before they could make a bargain about the method of disseminating a certain important piece of news, theirs by exclusive right of discovery and prior possession. Mrs. Day offered to give Mrs. Cole the privilege of Saco hill and Aunt Betty Jack's, herself to take Guide Board and Town House hills. Mrs. Day quickly proved the injustice of this decision, saying that there were twice as many families living in Mrs. Day's chosen territory as there were in that allotted to her, so the river road to Milliken's Hills was grudgingly awarded to Aunt Abby by way of compromise, and the hills started on what was a tour of mercy in those days—the furnishing of subject of discussion for long, quiet evenings.

Uncle Bart's joiner's shop was at the foot of Guide Board hill on the River-side of the bridge, and it was the least interesting spot in the whole village. The shop itself had a cheery look, with weather stained shingles, its small square windows and its hospitable door, half as big as the front side of the building. The step was an old millstone too worn for active service, and the piles of chips and shavings on each side of it had been there for so many years that sweet williams, clove nicks and purple phlox were growing them into necklaces, hanging them to their ears and weaving them into wreaths. Wonderful houses could always be built in the corner of the shop out of the little odds and ends and "nubbins" of white pine, and Uncle Bart was ever ready to cut or saw a special piece needed for some great purpose.

The sound of the plane was sweet music in the old joiner's ears. "I don't hardly know how I'd 'a' made out if I'd had to work in a mill," he said confidentially to Cephas. "The noise of a saw goin' all day, coupled with your mother's tongue mornin's an' evenin's, would 'a' been too much for my weak head. I'm a quiet man, Cephas, a man that needs a peaceful shop where he can get away from the comforts of home now and then without shirkin' his duty nor causin' gossip. If you should ever marry, Cephas—which don't look to me likely without you pick out a different girl—I'd advise you not to keep your stock o' paints in the barn or the shed, for it's altogether too handy to the house and the women folks. Take my advice and have a place to yourself, even if it's a small one. A shop or a barn has saved many a man's life and reason, Cephas, for it's ag'in a woman's nature to have you underfoot in the house without hectorin' you. Choose a girl same 's you would a horse that you want to hitch up into a span; 't ain't every two that'll stan' together without kickin'. When you get the right girl keep out of her way considerable an' there'll be less wear an' tear."

CHAPTER VII.

Cephas Speaks.

IT was June and the countryside was so beautiful it seemed as if no one could be unhappy, however great the cause. That was what Waitstill Baxter thought as she sat down on the millstone step for a word with the old joiner, her best and most understanding friend in all the village.

"I've come to do my mending here with you," she said brightly, as she took out her well filled basket and threaded her needle. "Isn't it a wonderful morning? Nobody could look the world in the face and do a wrong thing on such a day, could they, Uncle Bart?"

The meadows were a waving mass of golden buttercups; the shallow water at the river's edge just below the shop was blue with spikes of arrow weed; a bunch of fragrant water lilies, gathered from the mill pond's upper levels, lay beside Waitstill's mending basket, and every foot of roadside and field within sight was swaying with long stemmed white and gold daisies. The June grass, the friendly, humble, companionable grass, that no one ever praises as they do the flowers, was a rich emerald green, a velvet carpet fit for the feet of the angels themselves. And the elms and maples! Was there ever such a year for richness of foliage? And the sky, was it ever so blue or so clear, so far away, or so completely like heaven, as you looked at its reflection in the glassy surface of the river?

"Yes, it's a pretty good day," allowed Uncle Bart judiciously as he took a squint at his T-square. "I don't know's I should want to start out an' try to beat it! The Lord can make a good many kinds o' weather in the course of a year, but when he puts his mind on to it an' kind o' gives off my temper on Cephas! Still, I can think of a way to make matters come out right. I've got a great basket of mending that must be done, and you remember there's a choir rehearsal for the new anthem this afternoon, but anyway I can help a little on the cleaning. Then you can make Rodman do a few of the odd jobs; it will be a novelty to him. And Cephas will work his fingers to the bone for you, as you well know, if you treat him like a human being."

"All right!" cried Patty joyously, her mood changing in an instant. "There's Rod coming over the bridge now. Toss me my gingham apron and the scrubbing brush and the pail and the tin of soap and the cleaning cloths. Let's see. The broom's down there, so I've got everything. If I wave a towel from the store pack up luncheon for three. You come down, and bring your mending. Then when you see how I'm getting on we can consult. I'm going to take the 10 cents I've saved and spend it in raisins. I can get a good many if Cephas gives me wholesale price, with family discount subtracted from that. Cephas would treat me to candy in a minute, but if I let him we'd have to ask him to the picnic. Goodbye!" And the volatile creature darted down the hill singing "There'll be something in heaven for children to do" at the top of her healthy young lungs.

The waving signal a little later on showed that Rodman could go to the picnic, the fact being that he was having a holiday from 11 o'clock until 2, and Ivory was going to drive to the bridge at noon anyway, so his permission could then be asked.

Patty's mind might have been thought entirely on her ugly task as she swept and dusted and scrubbed that morning, but the reverse was true. Mark Wilson had gone away without saying goodby to her. This was not surprising perhaps, as she was about as much sequestered in her hill-top prison as a Turkish beauty in a harem. Neither was it astonishing that Mark did not write to her. He never had written to her, and as her father always brought home the very infrequent letters that came to the family Mark knew that any sentimental correspondence would be fraught with danger. No, everything was probably just as it should be, and yet—well, Patty had expected during the last three weeks that something would happen to break up the monotony of her former existence. She hardly knew what it would be, but the kiss dropped so lightly on her cheek by Mark Wilson still burned in remembrance and made her sure that it would have a sequel or an explanation.

Mark's sister Ellen and Phil Perry were in the midst of some form of lovers' quarrel, and during its progress Phil was paying considerable attention to Patty at Sabbath school and prayer meeting, occasions, it must be confessed, only provocative of very indirect and long distance advances. Cephas Cole, to the amazement of every one but his (constitutionally) exasperated mother, was "toning down" the ell of the family mansion, mitigating the lively yellow and putting another fresh coat of paint on it, for no conceivable reason save that of pleasing the eye of a certain capricious, ungrateful young hussy, who would probably say, when her verdict was asked, that she didn't see any particular difference in it one way or another.

Trade was not especially brisk at the deacon's emporium this sunny

she was not slatting and banging, pushing and pulling things about, her head and ears out of sight under a shelf and an irritating air of absorption about her whole demeanor; if that moment of silence could ever, under Providence, be simultaneous with the absence of customers in the front shop, Cephas intended to offer himself to Patience Baxter that very morning.

Once, during a temporary lull in the rear, he started to meet his fate when Rodman Boynton followed him into the back room, and the boy was at once set to work by Patty, who was the most consummate slave driver in the state of Maine. After half an hour there was another heaven sent chance, when Rodman went up to Uncle Bart's shop with a message for Waitstill, but, just then, in came Bill Morrill, a boy of twelve, with a request for a gallon of molasses, and would Cephas lend him a stone jug over Sunday, for his mother had hers "soakin' out in soap suds 'cause 'twa'n't smellin' jest right." Bill's message given, he hurried up the road on another errand, promising to call for the molasses later.

The minutes dragged by, and again there was perfect quiet in the stockroom. As the door opened, Cephas, taking his last chance, went forward to meet Patty, who was turning down the skirt of her dress, taking the cloth off her head, smoothing her hair and tying on a clean white ruffled apron, in which she looked as pretty as a pink.

"Patty," stammered Cephas, seizing his golden opportunity. "Patty, keep your mind on me for a minute. I've put a new coat o' paint on the ell just to please you. Won't you get married and settle down with me? I love you so I can't eat nor drink nor tend store nor nothin'!"

"Oh, I—I—couldn't, Cephas, thank you. I just couldn't—don't ask me!" cried Patty, as nervous as Cephas himself now that her first offer had really come. "I'm only seventeen, and I don't feel like settling down, Cephas, and father wouldn't think of letting me get married."

Uncle Bart's joiner's shop was at the foot of Guide Board hill on the River to the side of the bridge, and it was the sanest spot in the whole village. The shop itself had a cheery look, with weather stained shingles, its small rare windows and its hospitable porch, half as big as the front side of the building. The step was an old stone too worn for active service, the piles of chips and shavings on the side of it had been there for so many years that sweet williams, clove sticks and purple phlox were growing among them in the most irresponsible fashion, while a morning glory vine crept up and curled around a long added rake that had been standing against the front of the house since early spring. There was an air of cozy and amiable disorder about the place that would have invited friendly fabulation even had not Uncle Bart's white head, honest, ruddy face smiling welcome coaxed you in before you were aware. The Lord can make a good many kinds o' weather in the course of a year, but when he puts his mind on to it an' kind o' gives himself a free hand he can turn out a June mornin' that must make the devil sick to his stomach with envy! All the same, Waity, my cow ain't beavin' herself any better'n usual. She's been rampagin' since sun up. I've seen mother chasin' her out o' Mis' Day's garden patch twice a'ready! It seems real good an' homey to see you settin' there sewin' while I'm workin' at the bench. Cephas is down to the store, so I s'pose your father's off somewhere?"

Perhaps the June grass was a little greener, the buttercups yellower, the foliage more lacy, the sky bluer, because Deacon Baxter had taken his luncheon in a pail under the wagon seat and departed on an unwilling journey to Moderation, his object being to press the collection of some accounts too long overdue. There was something tragic in the fact, Waitstill thought, that whenever her father left the village for a whole day, life at once grew brighter, easier, more hopeful. One could breathe freely, speak one's heart out, believe in the future, when father was away.

The girls had harbored many delightful plans at early breakfast. As it was Saturday, Patty could catch little Rod Boynton if he came to the bridge on errands as usual, and if Ivory could spare him for an hour at noon they would take their luncheon and eat it together on the river bank as Patty had promised him. At the last moment, however, Deacon Baxter had turned around in the wagon and said: "Patience, you go down to the store and have a regular housecleanin' in the stockroom. Git Cephas to lift what you can't lift yourself, move everything in the place, sweep and dust it, scrub the floor, wash the winder and make room for the new stuff that they'll bring up from Milltown 'bout noon. If you have any time left over put new papers on the shelves out front and clean up and fix the show winder. Don't stand round gabbin' with Cephas, and see't he don't waste time that's paid for by me. Tell him he might clean up the terbaccer stains round the stove, black it and cover it up for the summer if he ain't too busy servin' cust'mers."

"The whole day spotted!" wailed Patty, flinging herself down in the kitchen rocker. "Father's powers of invention beat anything I ever saw! That stockroom could have been cleaned any time this month, and it's too heavy work for me anyway; it spoils my hands grubbing around those nasty, sticky, splintery boxes and barrels. Instead of being out of doors I've got to be shut up in that smelly, rummy, tobaccoey, salt-fishy, pepperminty place with Cephas Cole! He won't have a pleasant morning, I can tell you! I shall snap his head off every time he speaks to me."

"So I would!" Waitstill answered composedly. "Everything is so clearly his fault that I certainly would work

Trade was not especially brisk at the deacon's emporium this sunny June Saturday morning. Cephas may have possibly lost a customer or two by leaving the store vacant while he toiled and sweated for Miss Patience Baxter in the stockroom at the back, overhanging the river, but no man alive could see his employer's lovely daughter tugging at a keg of shingle nails without trying to save her from a broken back, although Cephas could have watched his mother move the house and barn without feeling the slightest anxiety in her behalf. If he could ever get the "heft" of the "dog-goned" cleaning out of the way so that Patty's mind could be free to entertain his proposition; could ever secure one precious moment of silence when

Origin of Smoking.

The origin of the custom of smoking is veiled in mystery. The Chinese are thought to have had the habit at a very early date, and this is not surprising, judging today from the Chinaman's fondness for the pipe. When Columbus discovered America he found smoking indulged in by all the tribes of Indians, but the practice had a religious association to them. From Santo Domingo tobacco was introduced into Spain and Portugal in 1550, but it was then used in the shape of snuff. Sir Walter Raleigh, however, is the first man of note to make smoking a fashionable habit.

CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

GO TO THE HEN, VAIN MEN.

The hen cocks not her head with pride
As o'er her daily walk she goes,
Nor does she throw an extra fling
When out parading with her beaux.

She casts no slur at lowly quacks,
Nor does she say to humble geese:
"The eggs you lay are very few,
You really aren't of much use."

She does not say to guinea hen,
"This plain you only own one dress,"
Nor does she slur the strutting turkey
About his awful queer headdress.

She does not boast of royal blood,
Though Biddy is a feathered queen;
She can trace back her pedigree
To cocks that strutted Caesar's green.

She does not brag about her crop,
Though it's a billion—plus a year,
Her eating aim seems but to work
And make the cost of eggs less dear.

The peacock that don't earn a cent
Shows his big tail and blows his horn,
But he does not crow at all,
Not during all day from early morn.

And when roosters strut and crow,
And say they do not earn their feed,
But Biddy is steady on the job,
Bringing forth the nation's need.

Go, she says, to the tolling ant,
And you do strut and think you're men
Cock, before the queen of birds
And learn a lesson from the hen.

THE BUFF TURKEY.

The white turkey tribe in this country consists of seven varieties—the Bronze, Narragansett, White Holland, Black Buff, Slate and Bourbon Red—and the Buffs hold no mean place in the strutting, baldheaded bunch for beauty and utility.

THE HOME CANNER.

The home canner is a very important help on the farm, because it saves the waste in perishable fruits and vegetables. With the canner the fruits and vegetables that the market cannot use may be saved to use later on the table and to sell when the market is prepared for these food products. Every farm should have a canner. The home canner is a means of saving surplus fruits and vegetables. It offers a way to keep certain foods during the winter or at times when fruits and vegetables are out of season. Most every farm has a surplus of fruits and vegetables at certain seasons when the market is not prepared to take the products fast enough to keep them from going to waste.

THE DEADLY CUTWORM.

It Has Been Destroying Wheat in Western Kansas—Preventive Measures.

The mysterious worm which has been reported to be destroying wheat in western Kansas is none other than the common clayback cutworm, according to George A. Dean, professor of entomology in the Kansas State Agricultural college.

When the first report of damage was received an entomologist was sent into the infested region. Infestation was found to be confined practically to wheat fields containing much volunteer wheat and to grass lands and alfalfa fields. Unless weather conditions are unfavorable for growing crops, the worms will probably, says the entomologists, cause no great loss of the wheat crop.

Preventive measures are best for controlling cutworms. If the wheat fields are plowed during the summer and the volunteer wheat is kept down until after seeding there is very little danger. Cutworms often migrate from field to field, in which case a good dust barrier should be constructed in which the worms may be destroyed. Where the worms are migrating or are concentrated in a small area, they can probably be killed by using the poison bran mash employed against grasshoppers. This should be sown in the evening along the edge of the field that the worms are entering.

Growing Alfalfa.

In preparing the land for alfalfa it is best to go slow. The first step is to plow the soil deep and prepare it for the first year for potatoes or corn, using ten loads of manure per acre, pulverizing or harrowing the land down in good shape. The corn or potato crop should then be kept thoroughly clean for a season. This will destroy weeds and the ground will have time to settle properly for alfalfa. Then the following spring the land should be double disked, rolled and harrowed. The seed can then be sown with an ordinary wheat drill as follows:

Mix, and mix thoroughly, about six pounds of cornmeal to ten pounds of alfalfa seed. The ordinary drill when closed to its finest calibration will sow about sixteen pounds per acre. Thus sixteen pounds of the mixture will mean ten pounds of alfalfa seed. This

MANAGEMENT OF BREEDING BULLS

Breeding bulls cannot produce good results without plenty of nourishing foods and intelligent treatment. The poorly conditioned, wornout bull cannot beget vigorous and healthy calves. To be at his best he must have plenty of suitable food given him at the proper intervals. There must be plenty of bulky and succulent foods, such as clover, alfalfa or mixed hay and silage or roots, with the addition of just enough wholesome grain foods to keep him in a vigorous, gaining condition. He should be watered regularly at least twice a day.

A large and comfortable box stall gives the bull more freedom and is

We keep Holsteins because they help and keep us all the time and respond nobly to kind treatment—in other words, I believe them to be the most docile breed of cattle in existence, and nervousness is not conducive to large production, said a New York farmer. To be sure, the Holsteins are not high testers in butter fat, but quantity offsets quality twice over in many cases, thus having the advantage over the other breeds in either milk or butter production. The illustration shows an ideal head of a Holstein bull.

more safe and convenient for the attendant in feeding and handling the animal. Such a bull pen should be ventilated and well lighted and arranged so that it may be darkened in the summer time to keep out the flies. He should be kept clean and provided with sufficient bedding material to prevent injury when getting up and down, as large animals resting on their knees on concrete or plank are very apt to bruise them and cause enlarged joints.

Exercise is necessary to the health and general thrift of the breeding bull. The best way to exercise the bull is to have a small lot tightly fenced and allow him to run with one or two in calf cows. In this way he will be more contented than if kept confined alone. If kept confined in a foul pen, where he is constantly fretting, he will have a spoiled disposition.

Always handle breeding bulls carefully and treat them kindly. If proper precautions are taken there is very little danger, yet it is always best to be on the safe side and handle them with a staff. The idea that a bull must be ill treated to know his place is a mistake. He is cunning and treacherous and if abused will await his chance to even up with you, and when he does get his temper aroused he is a very dangerous animal to be

MAKING INVESTMENTS.

Safety of Principal Is More Essential Than Big Returns.

First, here is a quotation from a thrift preacher:

"Many fortunes have been made many more will be made through investments. Many fortunes are too, through unwise investments. Thrifty habits and consulting with experienced persons like conservators bankers will give one the wisdom necessary to handle money wisely."

Second, I set down a quotation the advertisement of a wise and servative investment banker:

"In lending or investing money, possible care should be taken to get against hasty or impulsive decisions. Every endeavor should be made to assemble such reliable information will permit of the exercise of intelligent judgment. The man who assumes this attitude toward all investment propositions comes to have an increasing regard for the element of conservatism, and is ordinarily the first to seek the co-operation of investment experts."

Conservatism in investment means first of all, keeping the principal safe. What profits it to get 7 per cent a year on your money three or four years if at the end of that time misfortune of any sort takes the company you invested in such an extent that you would what you have paid $100 for is worth only $75? And when you leave road of conservatism in putting money out to work this is exactly experience you are likely to have.

Better keep your money in the savings bank, where it will earn about 4 per cent and where, if you wish, interest will be compounded, until you positively certain of the soundness of the investment advice you receive. Adding to the saved sum in a savings bank, too, is a mighty good way to fasten the thrift habit upon you. Choose as your first adviser in investment some one who has selected investments for the savings bank. If you learn what the elements of success in investment are. Go slow!—John Oskison in Chicago News.

LURE OF THE OPIUM PILL

And the Way the Cost Piles Up Enslaves Its Victim.

In the American Magazine appeared an article entitled "A Modern Opium Eater," written by a former newspaper man, who became a victim of habit and is now a convict in a penitentiary. The following extract from his article gives an idea of the amount of money required by an opium addict.

"By this time the cost of opium has become a very appreciable and persistent expense. From a few pills at 1 increased my allowance daily by until it took thirty or forty 'fun' (a Chinese measure; there are seventy fun in an ounce) to give me the relief I craved. The physical craving the body's demand for it—can be satisfied with approximately the same amount each day. The mental craving—the mind's demand—increases. What satisfies tonight is too little tomorrow, and so on. To feel even normal I now needed three or four times the half dozen pills which at first given me such exquisite pleasure. I get the exhilaration, the soothed contentment I craved, I, like each of the millions before me, had to use more and more each day.

THE BUFF TURKEY.

The whole turkey tribe in this country consists of seven varieties—the Bronze, Narragansett, White Holland, Black, Buff, Slate and Bourbon Red—and the Buffs hold no mean place in the strutting, baldheaded bunch for beauty and utility.

It is similar to the rest in that delectable taste and satisfying quality peculiar to the wonderful bird when should then be kept thoroughly clean for a season. This will destroy weeds and the ground will have time to settle properly for alfalfa. Then the following spring the land should be double disked, rolled and harrowed. The seed can then be sown with an ordinary wheat drill as follows:

Mix, and mix thoroughly, about six pounds of cornmeal to ten pounds of alfalfa seed. The ordinary drill when closed to its finest calibration will sow about sixteen pounds per acre. Thus sixteen pounds of the mixture will mean ten pounds of alfalfa seed. This is considered about the best amount to sow per acre under field conditions.

Another method of sowing is to cover or plug up all but the first, seventh, etc., holes in the drill with the indicator set at the same position as before. This will take about one pound of seed per acre and will put the rows forty-two inches apart, far enough to be cultivated.

Straw as a Fertilizer.

A large amount of straw is shipped from a county in Missouri to a nearby paper and strawboard factory. This straw brings the farmer about 50 cents per ton. A county agent recently found a pile of about 1,000 tons at Sikeston ready for shipment. He computes that as a fertilizer this straw is worth $2.50 per ton, in addition to its value as a means of adding organic matter to the soil. He is making a campaign of the county in an attempt to show the inadvisability of the farmers selling their straw and urging its more extensive use as bedding in stables and feed lots. Straw used as a top dressing on fall wheat has been found to practically insure a good stand of clover on lands where clover is otherwise grown with great difficulty.

Papyrus.

The papyrus of ancient times was made from the papyrus plant. The interior of the stalk of the plant after the rind had been removed was cut into thin slips in the direction of their length, and, these being laid on a flat surface in succession, similar slices were placed over them at right angles, and, their surfaces being cemented together by a sort of glue and subjected to the proper degree of pressure and well dried, the papyrus was complete.

Sparing No Pains.

"Would you come to dinner next Sunday?" said Mr. Crosslots.
 "Why, this is the fourth time in two weeks you have invited me to dinner. It's exceedingly kind of you."

"That's all right. We have to humor our cook in every way possible. She says she likes to hear you recite and sing comic songs."

An Expert.

She—How can you be so sure that you are in love with me and with no one else? Even I wonder at times whether there is a possibility of absolute certainty in such matters.

He—You lack experience and the confidence it begets. I've been in love forty times and know every symptom.

alone. He kept coming in a rout where he is constantly fretting, he will have a spoiled disposition.

Always handle breeding bulls carefully and treat them kindly. If proper precautions are taken there is very little danger, yet it is always best to be on the safe side and handle them with a staff. The idea that a bull must be ill treated to know his place is a mistake. He is cunning and treacherous and if abused will await his chance to even up with you, and when he does get his temper aroused he is a very dangerous animal to be around. It is many times best to put up with a few of his eccentricities than to undertake to club them out of him, or you will have a merry time in bringing him to your own way of thinking.

As a rule, it is best not to use a bull for service until he is fourteen or fifteen months old, and then he should be used carefully. Handled properly during the first two years he may be used many years.

The young and growing bull should have more feed, care and attention than an older animal. He needs more exercise to build up healthy and vigorous vital and reproductive organs. This demands a strong and vigorous body and nervous system. No animal can develop into that symmetrical form that he should unless he has plenty of the right kinds of food and good care. Neither will he be able to beget calves that will be a credit to his ancestry if he is kept in a rundown, emaciated condition.

If we get good results we must keep our breeding bulls in good, thrifty condition. To the accomplishment of this end we must feed them liberally and give them clean and well ventilated pens. Handle them quietly and not overtax their vitality by too much service. The well kept bull and his calves are objects of admiration to successful stock farmers and dairymen. Do not forget when feeding the breeding bull that you are feeding half of the herd—that is, from the standpoint of reproduction.

Separating Cow and Calf.

There will be less trouble both with the cow and the calf if they are separated as soon as possible after the calf is dropped. Give whole milk five or six days and then commence with skimmilk, giving only a small quantity at first and gradually increasing until all skimmilk is given. Always feed warm and never give more than is readily drunk clean.

The Valuable Brood Mare.

The brood mare will do almost as much work in twelve months as the gelding. She will pay for herself several times over in colts in a few years. A mare is not half so much bother to care for as a dairy cow. The colt is worth more than a litter of pigs. Keep brood mares on the farm; it means dollars.

A fifty-lb to my 'cook' and a quarter for the privilege of the room in which I snored made my habit cost me about $1 a day, which made a ghastly hole in the good salary I earned. I began to buy my opium by the can, paying from $25 to $30 for tins averaging 460 lbs. The elimination of the retailer's help helped temporarily, but the ever increasing demands of my habit overcame the saving."

Books Made by Slaves.

Some publishers in ancient Rome could turn out books rapidly and cheaply. A publisher of the Augustan era produced 1,000 copies of the second book of Martial in ten hours and these, sold at about 12 cents apiece, gave him a profit of 100 per cent. This was done by employing slaves carefully trained to write swiftly and legibly. Working in batches of 100, with an overseer dictating the book in hand, the task was complete in a very short time. As soon as copies were written they were revised, corrected, rolled up and bound. The slaves, the men required for maintenance from their master, thus he could afford to sell their productions at a very low rate.

Insulted the Horse.

As an illustration of the veneration with which the Argyll family was regarded in Rosemeath parish years ago, Principal Storey, then minister of parish, used to relate that one of his parishioners in detailing to the duke some grievances he had sustained from a neighbor added, "And, more than that, he had the impudence to strike me in the presence of his grace's horse."—Westminster Gazette.

Separated in Death.

It seems a strange irony of fate that Elizabeth Browning, the most devoted of wives, should be separated in death from her spouse. It is pure buff in color, except the wings, which shade down to almost white.

The eyes are dark hazel, beak, shank and toes bluish white and the caruncles on its bald head and throat wattles are the same changeable colors as with the other varieties.

Those who study the magnificent Bourbon Red quickly come to the conclusion that it is a cross of Buff and Bronze.

Don't be intemperate. This refers to temper and language as well as to booze. To Republicans, Democrats as well as Bull Moose.

Don't quote Scripture to the man who swindles you. That's casting pearls before swine. If it's done by mail let the postal authorities take a whack at him.

Don't lose your temper and jaw wrangle if your neighbor's hen files into your yard. Just pen her up and make him come for her every time. He'll soon get tired of that, and the hen too.

Don't let your wife get the reputation of having more chicken knowledge than you have. People will think you are lazy.

MAKING INVESTMENTS.

Safety of Principal is More Essential Than Big Returns.

First, here is a quotation from a brilliant preacher:

MUSIC AT HOME. FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Making the Piano a Pleasant Feature of Family Life.

AN EXPERIMENT THAT PAYS.

How One Girl Musician Tried It and Was Abundantly Rewarded in the Pleasure and Surprise It Afforded the Household.

In the Woman's Home Companion recently appeared a short article entitled "Music as a Pleasure," in which are reported the experiences of a girl named Clara, who had taken piano lessons for years, yet never used her music to give pleasure to her family.

She could play Beethoven sonatas and Chopin etudes and was considered by her parents and friends as making great progress. Yet she returned from a visit at the home of a girl friend thoroughly discontented with her music.

This girl friend, May Allen by name, played all the time, and when her family had company she always seemed to suit everybody. In the following extract from the article appears an account of the transformation that took place in Clara's music:

"The first intimation the family had of an actual upheaval in Clara's musical education was on a certain rainy Sunday, when she sat down at twilight and began a soft, rather low keyed 'Annie Laurie.' Her mother began to hum, under her breath at first, then more boldly, and Clara's brother called out 'Second verse!' when the first was ended and himself began it with a somewhat uncertain bass. From the old Scotch ballad Clara glided easily into the lately revived 'Silver Threads Among the Gold,' which the family all sang, and then the well loved 'Abide With Me,' which brought the little program to an end.

"Thank you, dear," said Clara's mother, and "That's what I call music," from Clara's father.

Some months later, when Clara's piano had become the center of the home and Clara had definitely decided to make music her life work, she was heard discussing the situation with May Allen, who was returning the visit of the summer before.

"When I came home from your house I was just disgusted with myself," said Clara. "I made up my mind that I'd make my piano as much a part of my home as yours was."

WARDROBE BOX.

Dainty Convenience For Keeping the Baby's Garments Neat.

A woman who wanted a covered receptacle for her baby's wardrobe and wished to combine it with a baby basket took an old shirt waist box with a hinged lid and had it recovered with a rose-pink denim inside and out. The lid was filled with cotton batting on top to make it comfortable when needed for a seat.

Inside she had a little tray about three inches deep. This was a plain four sided frame covered with cretonne. The frame had a cretonne bottom with two wooden slats across to make it firm. The slats were also cretonne covered.

On one side of this tray were placed

Sultan Ahmed Mirza, the sixteen-year-old shah of Persia, on attaining his official majority on July 21 took the constitutional oath of office in the palace of the national council at Teheran, Persia, in the presence of princes, high state officials and foreign diplomats.

The little shah, accompanied by the regent, Abdul Kassim Khan Nasser el Mulk, drove to the palace of the national council in a glass coach drawn by eight white horses. Immediately after the ceremony was over he proceeded to the mosque for prayer.

The crowning of the young shah occurred later in the day. The monarch seated himself on the peacock throne in the museum room of the palace in the presence of a great gathering. He first removed his head covering and then himself placed the imperial crown on his head. It was so large that he had to hold it in position while the chief mullah was making a brief oration.

Immediately afterward the monarch took off the crown and reassumed his simpler head covering, embellished with the famous Daria-i-Noor diamond, otherwise known as the Great Mogul, in the center of the aigret. The diamond is said to weigh over 200 carats.

THE NARROW UNDERSKIRT.

Despite Predictions, It Continues to Be Favored by Smart Women.

It was prophesied that the underskirt would soon drop from its secondary place, the flaring tunic be lengthened and women go back to one skirt instead of wearing two, as they do now. There is little sign of this at the present moment, for the wide tunic, as contrasted with the narrow skirt beneath, seems to delight women.

This narrow underskirt must be slashed in the middle of the back if one would walk with comfort, and it has to be short if one would walk at all. Both of these features are added, or rather incorporated on the present garment. As to the exact spot between the hips and the ankles where the flare should come, each woman judges of that for herself. Her own length of line must determine it.

Not only have tunics got this width at the hem, but so have all the modish coats. They hang away from the figure as soon as they pass the waist line, and many do not wait for that spot to bulge into space.

On one side of this tray were placed the powder box brushes, scissors and the usual contents of the baby basket; on the other the little shirts and bands safely kept from dust by the lid. The whole was easily lifted out with two loops of cretonne when the interior of the box was to be reached, as the tray was extremely light in weight. Underneath the tray were kept the little dresses and petticoats safe from dust and handling.

When not in use the little box was pushed under a dressing table in the mother's room and was accessible at any time.

How to Sweep.

Few people handle a broom properly, although accustomed to its use every day of their lives. Always draw the broom by leaning it forward, because this allows the dirt to be moved along more gently and will not raise much dust. Most sweepers thrust the broom ahead of them in a sort of digging way, with the handle toward the sweeper. This breaks the broom, wears out the carpet, flicks up dust and makes the sweeping much more laborious.

Fall and Winter Fabrics.

Fabrics will be of greater weight, says the Dry Goods Economist, in worsteds, gabardine, serge, poplin and prunella; in woolens, broadcloth, wool velour, zibeline, peau de souris and novelty weaves; checks and a few stripes as fancies; satins, crepe de chine, novelty moire, faille, messaline, charmeuse and soft finish taffeta; velvets, plushes and fur fabrics.

Bismarck's Appetite.

Bismarck, the Iron Chancellor, had an enormous capacity for eating and drinking. He once told a friend that the largest number of oysters he ever ate was 175. He first ordered twenty-five; then, as they were very good, fifty more, and, consuming these, determined to eat nothing else and ordered another hundred, to the great amusement of those present. Bismarck was then twenty-six and had just returned from England.

Dinah is a handy person to have around the house. She affords lots of amusement to your family and friends when they are seated on the porch. Any one can have a Dinah. One eye is marked at the junction of the first and second fingers; the other is marked opposite on the smooth back. For the cap use any handkerchief and wrap it around the outer edge of the fist.

To make Dinah really look as though she were talking move the thumb. If you change your voice it will seem as though Dinah were speaking, and you can make her say funny things. Rest your fist on a table. Dinah will look real. Practice this before you give an exhibition in public.

A Famous Dog.

One of the most famous of pet dogs was a French poodle, Moustache, which belonged to one of Napoleon's officers. He was not trained to military service, as dogs are now, but he took a gallant part in the engagements at Marengo and at Jena, saved several lives, detected a spy and performed other feats. His most famous performance was at Austerlitz, where he sprang forward, seized the colors "from the very grasp of the enemy and bore them in triumph to his fellow soldiers." For this deed of valor Marshal Lannes publicly thanked Moustache on the field of battle and fastened on his neck the cross of the Legion of Honor.

Garden vases are particularly beautiful and are built along the most classic lines. Many are reproductions of vases found in the old Roman gardens. Others are copied from the famous vases in the gardens at Versailles.

Garden benches are useful as well as ornamental. One beautiful specimen is an exact reproduction of one that was found in the ruins of Pompeii. These benches when placed at the end of an avenue of trees are beautiful.

Honor to a Napanee Girl.

Miss Margaret McConachie, daughter of Robt. McConachie, of South Napanee, had the honor of being awarded the first prize, a fifty dollar gold bracelet watch, donated by Mr. Redner, of Winnipeg, in the singing contest for girls under sixteen years, at Picton Old Boys' Exhibition on Tuesday evening last. This contest was open to all the towns and municipalities in this part of Ontario. Miss McConachie has a natural voice and a splendid ear. Good musicians are born. What little training she has received was from Mrs. A. L. Howard, (licentiate in music of Toronto University), Napanee. She is a member of St. Andrew's church choir here. ### Camp Fire.

Cadet Corps No. 357, Tamworth, Ont., held a camp fire on Friday evening as a farewell to Company Leader Ray Robinson, before he left for Saskatoon. It was attended by nearly all the cadets, their instructor and the other teachers of the school. The boys spent a very pleasant time with music, song, and story from 6.30 to 8 p.m. and then the instructor called on the officers for speeches. Half Company Leaders, Thomas Lacey and Donald R. Harrison spoke very feelingly of the loss sustained by the company on the removal of the company leader, who had commanded them since their first organization nearly two years ago, and Company Leader Robinson replied in a very neat speech after which they all joined hands around the camp fire and sang "Auld Lang Syne" followed by the National Anthem. Company Leader Robinson leaves in a few days for Saskatoon. His successor in the corps will be Half Company Leader Lacey, and Corporal J. N. Barnes will succeed to the half company leadership, thus rendered vacant.

The W.C.T.U. will hold a rummage sale the first week in November. A portion of the proceeds to go to the Patriotic fund.

Walking Across Continent.

Mr. Jack Fitzhelin, who left Vancouver May first on a walk across the Continent, his destination being Halifax, Nova Scotia, reached Napanee on Saturday last, reporting at the Express Office. He is a young man, slim but sinewy, and looks fit to complete his tour. His average per day is twenty miles. He pays his way drawing and selling paslet pictures, which are creditable productions. He reports the country looking fine. He passed through the Canadian west, south of Winnipeg. He spent a short time in Napanee, arriving from Belleville in about six hours. He left in the afternoon for Kingston and on to Montreal.

The Trade That Was Germany's

SOME benefits that Canada might derive from Europe's war are denied us by restrictions of Empire patriotism. The keenest Canadian business man would not willingly profit to-day by a situation that handicaps the Mother Country.

But in the field of commercial activity now open to Canadian manufacturers, there are now—by reason of this unsought war—various opportunities for us, which mean loss to none other than Germany.

Much of the trade that was Germany's in Canada should now become our own. Who but our own Canadian manufacturers should make the hosiery, the underwear, the paper, the toys, the silver, and much of the chemicals, dye-stuffs, and other things Germany has supplied us?

All this additional business, now so readily tending toward Canadian concerns, will be divided among them in proportions depending upon the aggressiveness with which they, respectively, go after such business.

And in that aggressiveness, as in all commercial campaigning, ADVERTISING must be an important factor.

Doubly important right now—because this trade that was Germany's is going to be apportioned among our factories at once. Our people must have these things—not six months or a year hence—they are buying them now. Stocks are running low, and the firms that ask most insistently for their share are going to get it—large and quickly.

It will be a test.

Advertising will soon reveal which of our industrial enterprises are most worthy and best prepared to profit by Germany's set-back. The firms first to advertise for this business that was Germany's will be the first to profit and the ones to profit most largely when that business becomes Canada's.

Who, among our Canadian manufacturers, is willing to be left out in the cold? Who, among such firms, will fail to advertise?

German mercantile houses in Nicaragua, but the business has been killed. The Spaniards and the Indians are death on the Germans, hating them like poison, and German trade in that region is a thing of the past—Whig.
